

A Simple Guide to the Yoga of Awareness

Kundalini Yoga

The Flow of Eternal Power

As taught by Yogi Bhajan, Ph.D.
Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa

KUNDALINI YOGA

The Flow of Eternal Power

A Simple Guide to the Yoga of Awareness
As taught by Yogi Bhajan, Ph.D.

SHAKTI PARWHA KAUR KHALSA

A Perigee Book

A Perigee Book
Published by The Berkley Publishing Group
A division of Penguin Putnam Inc.
375 Hudson Street
New York, NY 10014

Thanks to the 3HO Foundation for permission to use previously published material.

Copyright © 1996 by Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa
Book design and layout by Guru Raj Kaur Khalsa
Interior illustrations by Shabad Kaur Khalsa
Illustrative consultant: Shiva Singh Khalsa
Yoga postures photographed by Sat Simran Kaur Khalsa and Peraim Kaur Khalsa
Yoga postures demonstrated by Sadhana Kaur Khalsa, Siri Simran Kaur Khalsa, and Nam Kaur Khalsa
Cover design by Charles Björklund and Celeste Ranck
Cover art by Charles Björklund

All rights reserved. This book, or parts thereof, may not be reproduced in any form without permission.

First Time Capsule Books edition: June 1996
Time Capsule Books edition ISBN: 0-9639847-6-4
First Perigee edition: August 1998

Published simultaneously in Canada.

The Penguin Putnam Inc. World Wide Web site address is <http://www.penguinputnam.com>

Approved by the Kundalini Research Institute. This book has received the KRI seal of approval which is granted only to those products which have been approved through the Kundalini Research Institute review process for the accuracy and integrity of those portions which embody the technology of Kundalini Yoga and 3HO lifestyle as taught by Yogi Bhajan.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa.

Kundalini yoga : the flow of eternal power : a simple guide to the yoga of awareness as taught by Yogi Bhajan, Ph.D. / Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa.

p. cm.

"A Perigee book."

Originally published : Los Angeles : Time Capsule Books, 1996.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0-399-52420-7

1. Kundalini. 2. Harbhajan Singh Khalsa, Yogiji. I. Title.

BL1238.56.K86S43 1998 97-52656

294.6'436—dc21

CIP

Printed in the United States of America

20 19 18 17 16 15 14 13 12 11

DEDICATION

This book is dedicated to those who have loved me, my best Teachers:

My Mother, who taught me to smile and gave me unshakable faith in God.

My Two Brothers, who showed me that men can be kind and wonderful.

Yogi Bhajan, my Spiritual Teacher, who gave me my Self.

His life of infinite compassion, inexhaustible patience and constant sacrifice has provided an awesome example of Keeping Up!

DESIGN & LAYOUT
Guru Raj Kaur Khalsa

ILLUSTRATIONS
Shabad Kaur Khalsa

ILLUSTRATIVE CONSULTANT
Shiva Singh Khalsa

YOGA POSTURES
Photographs
Sat Simran Kaur Khalsa
Peraim Kaur Khalsa

Demonstrated by Sadhana Kaur Khalsa
Siri Simran Kaur Khalsa
Nam Kaur Khalsa

Contents

Section One

THINGS TO KNOW (and a Few Things to Try)

- You Are Here—How to Read This Book 1
- Chapter 1 What's It All About? 5
- Chapter 2 One Goal 11
- Chapter 3 Tuning in 13
- Chapter 4 Breath of Life 19
- Chapter 5 Mantra: "Magic Words" 35
- Chapter 6 Conquer the Mind, You Conquer the World 41
- Chapter 7 Mysterious Kundalini: "Where There's Mastery, There's No Mystery" 47
- Chapter 8 Chakras—Energy Centers. Where Are You At? 53
- Chapter 9 Stress, Stamina, and Nerves of Steel 63
- Chapter 10 Healing 69
- Chapter 11 Let's Talk About Food 79
- Chapter 12 Creatures of Habit 97
- Chapter 13 Drugs 99
- Chapter 14 Sleep 107
- Chapter 15 How to Get Up in the Morning 115
- Chapter 16 Sadhana: Your Spiritual Bank Account 121
- Chapter 17 Woman is Spelled "Double-You-O-Man" 131
- Chapter 18 Four Teachers—Things Your Mother Never Told You 145
- Chapter 19 My Spiritual Teacher, Yogi Bhajan 149
- Chapter 20 Communication 159
 - The Snake That Poisons Everybody 164
- Chapter 21 Happiness 165
- Chapter 22 Life is a Movie 167
- Chapter 23 Other Paths of Yoga 175
- Chapter 24 Tantric Yoga 179
- Chapter 25 The Ten Bodies 183
- Chapter 26 Going Home 187

Section Two

THINGS TO DO

General Guidelines for the Practice of Kundalini Yoga 197

MANTRA and MEDITATION

Key to Pronunciation 201

How to Chant 203

Invoking The Flow of Eternal Power:

ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO 205

The Seed Sound: SAT NAM 206

Raise the Kundalini: Chakra Meditation 207

Meditation for Change: SA-TA-NA-MA 208

Change of Habit: Breath Meditation 210

Mantra of Protection 211

Meditation for Positive Communication 213

Meditation for Effective Communication 214

My Favorite Mantra: "Long EK ONG KAR's" 215

Meditation to Clear the Past, Present & Future 217

"May the Force Be With You": PAVAN GURU 219

Shout It In the Shower: ANG SANG WAHE GURU! 220

"The Persian Wheel" Meditation 221

Sadhana Mantras for the Aquarian Age 222

KRIYAS and PRANAYAM (Exercises & Breathing)

Energy Up! Mul Bandh and Sat Kriya 225

Sharpen Your Mind: Basic Breath Series 227

Loosen-Up, Tune-Up: Kriya For Elevation 229

Easy Set 235

Balance Your Glands: Angles 239

Stretch in the Morning 245

Breathe and Move in the Morning 249

Sweat and Laugh...(anytime) 251

Digestion and Elimination 255

How To Give a Foot Massage 259

Things to Do at Bedtime 263

Three Stress Meditations 267

TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF AS A WOMAN 269

The Magnificent Seven 270

A Conscious Act 272

Disease Prevention for Women 275

The Power of Foods 276

Yogic Tidbits For Women: Foods, Health 278

GGM: Grace of God Meditation 280

RECIPES

Yogi Tea—The Original 285

Golden Milk 286

Ginger Tea 286

Kitcheree 287

Potent Potatoes 288

Spicy Beet-Sweet Potato Casserole 289

Saffron Rice 290

Ghee 290

Sources and Resources 291

Glossary 307

Index 309

POEMS BY THE AUTHOR

Prana 33

You Are What You Eat 94

Sleepy Time Song 114

Sadhana 128

Choose Your Words 162

Past Lives 174

The Choice 192

The Persian Wheel (Gatga) 221

Foreword

Where to Begin? First steps are important and often color the rest of the journey. This book puts you on secure footing in the right direction for a more fulfilled life and an awakened consciousness.

Shakti's style to mix profound ideas with humor and a personal almost "chatty" conversation makes the journey fun and painless. She constantly helps you along with a song, a poem, a story, and just enough bullet points to insure you remember what's important.

A student who had studied for many years had become confused with all the opinions and the hundreds of approaches. All the student wanted was clear guidance to establish a personal practice for a happy and spirit filled life. The student approached a master yogi. The yogi smiled and spread his fingers. He placed the little finger at the navel and the thumb tip at the heart. He said, "The journey you must travel is only six inches long. Begin at the navel and reach the heart."

In other words, all the studies and intellectual ideas are best dealt with by a practice, a way of living that takes you from the concerns of control and survival to the experience of the heart, connected and free. The Kundalini energy of awareness is initiated in the body from the navel. Self understanding awakens in the heart center.

The master said a lot with a simple gesture.

This is Shakti's special gift. From her first chapter to the last you travel from basic habits to the heart center of living a better life with a truer sense of your self.

I am biased. I learned Kundalini Yoga at the feet of Yogi Bhajan and from Shakti Parwha in 1969. I have trained teachers of this science as Director of Training for Kundalini Research Institute and 3HO for over twenty years. In all this time I have not found a better place to start than with the wit and wisdom of Shakti.

I am grateful for her clarity, fidelity to the original teachings, and her decades of service to share this with all.

Enjoy one of the best and quickest introductions to this sacred science of being human.

*MSS Gurucharan Singh Khalsa, Ph. D.
Director of Training KRI
(Kundalini Research Institute)*

Acknowledgments

One of the pillars of my faith is called seva. It means “selfless service.” The spirit of seva permeated the creation of this book. Many wonderful people gave generously of their expertise, time, and energy during the four and a half years it took to complete. I had made three earlier attempts to write this book several years before the crucial December, 1991, Khalsa Council workshop facilitated by Subagh Singh Khalsa that motivated me to focus and commit to completing it. Guruka Singh Khalsa and Siri Ved Kaur Khalsa gave valuable editorial input to those earlier versions.

Dr. Sat Kaur Khalsa shared with me three useful—and for me imperative—suggestions. If you’re planning to write a book, I suggest you also follow them. They worked for me! 1) Make appointments with yourself for the actual time you plan to work on the book, write them down, and honor them. Start at the time you’re committed to, and stop at the time you predetermined. Then write down your next appointment and stick to it. 2) Chant and pray before each writing session. 3) Just write, before you try to edit. Get the whole thing down on paper (or in the computer) before you start the editing process. Writing and editing are two different modes.

In the proofreading and editing department I had extremely useful comments from my designated readers, Harijot Kaur Khalsa, Sat Narayan Simran Kaur, Shanti Kaur Khalsa, Susan Liebman Ladd, and Ted Garon. (Harijot’s artistic eye also helped in selecting the illustrations.) Gobind Kaur Khalsa not only held up under the marathon final proofreading sessions to meet the printer’s deadline, but in the early stages helped organize the chapters. Gurupreet Kaur Khalsa jumped in at a moment’s notice to proofread, as did Ek Ong Kar Kaur Khalsa, and Sahib Amar Kaur Khalsa, computer expert, volunteered to enter all the punctuation and spelling corrections needed on the first draft.

Both Sat Simran Kaur Khalsa and Peraim Kaur Khalsa spent endless hours trying to take just the right photos to illustrate the yoga postures. Nam Kaur Khalsa, Siri Simran Kaur Khalsa, and Sadhana Kaur Khalsa demonstrated not only great yogic flexibility, but patience and endurance. A special salute to Sardarni Guru Amrit Kaur who was able to perform the miracle of taking a usable photo of me.

Thanks to Guru Raj Kaur Khalsa and Shabad Kaur Khalsa who really served above and beyond the call of duty!

My deepest gratitude to all of the above, as well as to Aradhana Singh Khalsa, Dr. Gurucharan Singh Khalsa, Hari Nam Singh Khalsa, Jagat Joti Singh Khalsa, and the scores of others who have given such enthusiastic encouragement and support to this project. God bless you each and all. Your kindness is engraved in my heart.

A few more thanks are in order for this Second Edition of Kundalini Yoga: The Flow of Eternal Power. First of all to Susan R. Clark, who sent me (by e-mail, from Alaska) an amazingly detailed index she had prepared for her students.

Second, thanks to the Senior Editor at Perigee, Sheila Curry, who helped me condense the new index, and kindly did not tamper with the rest of the copy.

And finally, I bow to the wisdom of my new publisher, who omitted my picture on the back cover!

Humbly yours,
Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa
August 1998

Section One

THINGS TO KNOW

and a Few Things to Try

Before You Begin . . .

Always consult your physician before beginning this or any other exercise program. Nothing in this book is to be construed as medical advice. The benefits attributed to the practice of Kundalini Yoga come from the centuries-old yogic tradition. Results will vary with individuals.

You Are Here

How to Read This Book

This book is brazenly personal. I have taken the marvelous technology of Kundalini Yoga as taught by my spiritual teacher, Yogi Bajan, the Master of Kundalini Yoga, and presented it in my own conversational style. This is the way I have been teaching students in Kundalini Yoga Beginners classes for twenty-seven years: straight, simple, and with a smile!

This is not a manual or a textbook but it does have specific “things” you can do: breathing, stretching, chanting, meditating. I’ve also included some psychological, philosophical, and I hope, inspirational commentary, plus many excerpts from Yogi Bajan’s lectures. There are some personal anecdotes and a sprinkling of my own poetry. Each topic could be a whole book in itself. Believe it or not, I’ve tried to be brief, but it’s difficult to be brief and thorough at the same time.

You’ll find new ideas, new ways of looking at yourself and the people in your life, plus some yogic tidbits that you can apply to everyday activities. I want this book to whet your appetite to experience more of the vast technology of Kundalini Yoga. I know it can transform your life from the inside out and the outside in. I know, because I tried it. You won’t know until you try it. You will find most quotes in this book are Yogi Bajan’s words. After all, he’s the Master Yogi! Here is the first:

“Doing is Believing.”

I genuinely love and value the teachings I’m about to share with you. I want as many people as possible to benefit from them because I know that the more people who practice Kundalini Yoga, the more happy people there will be in the world. The more happy people there are in the world, the better the world is going to be for me to live in!

I hope you'll read this book with an open mind and an open heart, and practice the exercises and meditations. They have transformed my life; I know they can do the same for you.

You don't have to read this book in exact order (though it's preferable) but I do recommend that after you finish this that you read the first

Starting right now, you
CAN change your life.
You CAN be Bountiful,
Blissful & Beautiful.
In fact, you already are!
You just have to experience it.

five chapters in sequence. They will get you off to a good start. Then, if you wish, you can go to the Table of Contents, see what grabs you, and read that next. The book is organized into two sections: the first part is Things To Know (and a few things to try) and the second part is specific Things To Do.

This can't be a step-by-step book, because it's a book about life and we live life on many different levels going in many different directions all at the same time. We have a physical life, a mental life, and a spiritual life happening simultaneously.

These pages contain a blueprint for building a healthy, happy, and holy life. Yogi Bhanan calls it the "3HO way of life." It is your birthright. This concept was one of the first things Yogi Bhanan talked about when I met him in 1968. The 3HO Foundation was born as a result of his inspiration. Now a world-wide organization with 300 centers in thirty-five countries, 3HO is dedicated to sharing these life affirming teachings.

I have to pause here and explain what I mean by "holy," otherwise you may get the wrong impression. Holy does NOT mean to be "holier than thou." It does not mean to be sanctimonious. The 3HO yogic definition of holy is pretty straightforward. It has two parts: First, "Do unto others what you want them to do unto you" (sound familiar?), and second, "Receive each inhalation consciously, gratefully aware that each breath you receive is a gift!"

Learning how the yogis define concepts gives us a welcome new perspective on life. That's another feature of this book, getting a new perspective on everything, including who you are.

I refuse to claim that reading this book and learning new terms will solve all your problems. But it will give you powerful, practical tools to meet the challenges in your life and consciously, courageously conquer them.

Starting right now, you can change your life! As Yogi Bhajan says, "you can be: Bountiful, Blissful, and Beautiful. In fact, you ALREADY ARE! You just have to experience it.

1

What's It All About?

You Don't Have to Be a Pretzel

Yogi Bhajan pointed to me and said to the class he was teaching at Claremont College, "See, Shakti's doing it; if she can do it, anybody can do it."

That was in 1969. I still consider myself one of the least physically coordinated people on the planet, and yet, here I am, twenty-seven years later, not only doing Kundalini Yoga, but teaching it, and writing a book about it, because I sincerely believe it's true, if I can do it, anybody can!

The physical exercise part of Kundalini Yoga is just one aspect of this Yoga of Awareness. Among the many outrageous quotes from Yogi Bhajan is, "If flexibility of the body is the only yoga, then clowns in the circus are the best yogis." Important as the physical body is, and as desirable as flexibility is, there is much more to be gained from yoga, there is your entire happiness and success in life.

When you buy a new automobile, a toaster, or a VCR (almost anything with moving parts) the manufacturer provides a book of instructions. The owner's manual recommends procedures to get maximum efficiency. It lists checkpoints and times for periodic maintenance. It tells you what to look for if it's not working properly and it suggests how to avoid future problems.

So where are the instructions for your care and maintenance? When you were born you didn't come neatly packaged with a tag tied around your big toe, labeled "Care and Feeding." Though a human being is surely one of the most complicated mechanisms ever created, still an instruction manual isn't provided with each newborn baby. Perhaps the Manufacturer assumed that mothers would study directly with the experts to learn how to care for the new arrival. And who are these "experts"? Not the psychologists and pediatricians, not well-meaning friends and neighbors, mothers and grandmothers (though the latter probably have learned a lot through trial and error).

The trained experts, the people who developed the finest methods to care for, maintain, and get maximum mileage out of this human mechanism (not just physically, but mentally, emotionally, and spiritually), were the yogis.

Detailed information on the care and feeding, maintenance and preservation of a human being was revealed to the yogis thousands of years ago. They have been custodians of this technology ever since. They are the expert mechanics, scientists, engineers, and problem-solvers for the intricate human machine in all its aspects: body, mind, and soul.

THE SCIENCE OF KUNDALINI YOGA

For thousands of years this yogic knowledge was carefully handed down by oral tradition from Master to disciple. The Master spoke, the student memorized and practiced. Eventually a portion of this vast body of knowledge leading to enlightenment, or self-mastery, was written down. Some of these sacred teachings can be found in ancient Vedic texts.¹

There's a yogic art and science to all aspects of human life. There's a yogic way to get up in the morning; there's a yogic way to go to sleep at night. A way to eat, and a way to breathe! Virtually every aspect of human existence has an enlightened, efficient, and effective way to do it. This legacy of technical and spiritual knowledge that Yogi Bhajan studied and mastered in India is the gift he brought to the West.

THE YOGI'S GIFT

Kundalini Yoga was always kept very secret. It was never taught publicly until 1969, when Yogi Bhajan challenged the ages-old tradition of secrecy.

He spent many years in India learning, mastering, and perfecting the habits and practices of Kundalini Yoga. It sometimes took months of waiting patiently and being tested in many ways before a Teacher would reveal anything at all to him. Yet he has offered to share these ancient secrets with us, openly and honestly. His motive? Compassion. He wants us to stop suffering. He sees the reality of our inner beauty, power, and potential and he wants us to discover it for ourselves.

Yogi Bhajan started teaching Kundalini Yoga in easy-to-digest yogic “tid-bits.” I want to share these teachings with you that same way. I want to make it as simple and easy as I can for you to apply them in your daily life so you can feel better, look better, and be a happier person.

Of all the technology and wisdom that Yogi Bhajan could have taught from his vast storehouse of mastery, he chose to teach Kundalini Yoga because it is so effective, comprehensive, and “do-able.”

It is the birthright of every human being to be healthy, happy and holy.

This is a yoga for householders, for people who have to cope with the daily challenges and stresses of holding jobs, raising families, managing businesses. It gives results in the shortest possible time. It does not require you to leave your home, become an ascetic or sit in a cave. Kundalini Yoga is for everyone who wants the skills to cope successfully with the challenges of living in this day and age.² (And you don’t have to be a pretzel. For the physical exercises, if you can breathe, and just lean in the right direction, you’ll be benefitted. I told you, if I can do it, anybody can.)

WHAT DOES KUNDALINI YOGA DO?

The practice of Kundalini Yoga balances the glandular system, strengthens the nervous system and enables us to harness the energy of the mind and the emotions, so we can be in control of ourselves, rather than being controlled by our thoughts and feelings.

Another purpose of this book is to dispel the mystery, the myths and misunderstanding, that exist about Kundalini Yoga. It is a precious gem of sacred knowledge and power. I am going to show you some of its many brilliant facets. It can make your life shine. It is like a magic jewel that I can give to you and still keep for myself. In fact, sharing it makes it brighter for me!

THE GOAL

Kundalini Yoga is designed to give you “hands on” experience of your highest consciousness. It teaches a method by which you can achieve the sacred purpose of your life. This can be described in many ways, such as:

- Experience your inner light of consciousness.
- Experience your own highest consciousness.
- Discover your real Identity.

The practices enable you to merge with or “yoke” with the universal Self. This merging of individual consciousness with universal consciousness creates a “divine union” called “yoga.”

The practice that leads to this state of self-mastery is also called “yoga.” So the road and the destination have the same name, “yoga.” There are many different kinds, or schools of yoga. (See Many Paths.) Those who practice yoga are called yogis and those who master yoga are also called yogis.

The technology of Kundalini Yoga applies its science to our bodies and minds, and is aimed at spirit which has no boundaries, no discrimination. Therefore it is for everyone. It is universal and nondenominational.

IS YOGA A RELIGION?

Kundalini Yoga is not a religion. Kundalini Yoga is a Sacred Science. It is sacred because it deals with the GOD (“G”: that which Generates; “O”: that which Organizes; “D”: that which Delivers or Destroys) in you. It is scientific because it provides a technology, a method by which anyone who practices it can experience that divine identity within. The way you choose to worship that G-O-D is your religion.

Yes, Kundalini Yoga does require FAITH (not belief), just as a course in chemistry requires the faith of the student to do the laboratory experiments so he can prove the validity of the formulas for himself.

LONG TERM GAIN / SHORT TERM GAIN

As you work toward achieving the goal of Yoga or liberation, you become more capable, more confident, and more efficient in whatever you're doing in your external life. Simultaneously, you become progressively more aware of yourself on all levels. It's a win/win situation!

SECRETS OF POWER

To fully appreciate the value of this great gift Yogi Bhajan has brought us, we need to understand why, for thousands of years, the Yogis kept it secret. They preserved and carefully guarded the knowledge of the inner and outer workings of a human being, very cautiously revealing the technology, selectively passing it down verbally from Master to chosen disciple. They were selective because knowledge gives power, and power can corrupt. Traditionally, disciples had to spend many years proving their trustworthiness and ethical purity to receive the sacred science of Kundalini Yoga. Only after the student demonstrated humility, self-discipline, and obedience would the Teacher reveal the secret Kriyas. Yet Yogi Bhajan has taken it upon himself to share his knowledge openly with everyone. (See the chapter My Spiritual Teacher for more about this remarkable human being, Master of Kundalini Yoga and White Tantric Yoga.) He has done this in order to prepare humanity for the major changes that the planet is going through. The world we knew even ten years ago has totally changed—geographically, socially, economically, morally. We have already crossed from the Piscean Age into the Age of Aquarius.³ As he has said, “What used to work, won’t work anymore.” It’s a new Age already, and this ancient technology of Kundalini Yoga can give us the awareness and the strength to make our transition smoother.

THE POWER OF PRANA

Kundalini Yoga deals specifically with the most powerful thing in the universe, the basic life energy, prana. Prana is the sub-atomic energy, the life force. It was known to yogis for thousands of years, long before the scientists split the atom. It is prana that you receive with every breath. It’s mighty powerful stuff. Kundalini Yoga is the path of discovery of the source of the prana in us and teaches us how to use it.

WHY PRACTICE KUNDALINI YOGA?

People decide to practice Kundalini Yoga for many reasons. Possibly your chiropractor suggested it. Or your psychologist, physician, or next-door neighbor recommended it to help you relax, cope with stress, and find peace of mind. Or, perhaps you’re simply curious. It doesn’t matter what your reason, you are welcome! But be warned: If you genuinely practice it, you will find yourself and your life changing. If you don't want to change, if you're totally content with yourself and your life as it is now, then don't go any further. But if you want to explore the possibilities of your highest potential, then keep reading.

Kundalini Yoga is much more than just a system of physical exercises. It is a dynamic, powerful tool for expanding awareness. Approach it with respect, with reverence, and with openness.

The purpose of this book is to get you to try it for yourself, so you can have your own experience of the benefits it has to offer.

"DOING IS BELIEVING."

Let the words on these pages help you take the next step on your personal journey of self-discovery. You are, indeed, a unique and wonderful being with a very special destiny. Let Kundalini Yoga, the Yoga of Awareness, help you achieve your personal best!

2

One Goal

Spiritual Travel

All things come from God, everything will eventually return to God, including you. How you get there is your particular path. The Yogi wants to have that experience sooner and chooses a path to travel that best suits his¹ temperament and capabilities.

Different paths suit different people. Going for a hike? You can make the rugged, uphill climb or follow well-marked trails and stroll along at a leisurely pace. Want to go farther? You can fly direct to New York from Los Angeles, or make stops along the way. You can even change planes. If you have lots of time, you may decide to take a bus or a train along the scenic route. Some folks enjoy driving across country. The choice of "how" to get there is yours. The choice of "when" to get there is affected by the "how." The "where" is predetermined, because although there are many paths back "Home," there's no place else to go.

Kundalini Yoga might be called the direct, non-stop jet route. It is a very comprehensive technology, yet ideally suited to people who lead active lives in today's world.

In the back of this book you can read brief descriptions of some of the other paths of yoga. Since Kundalini Yoga is what this book is all about, I'm going to give it a lot more space than the others. I think that's fair, don't you?

Kundalini Yoga balances the glandular system, strengthens the 72,000 nerves in the body, expands the lung capacity, and purifies the bloodstream. It brings balance to the body, mind, and soul. It teaches positive, self-

¹ Anytime you see "he" or "his" for a non-specific person, please assume I also include "she" and "her." Let's save ink.

WHAT DOES "YOGA" MEAN?

"What does yoga mean? Yoga means to be united. When you unite with your soul and unite with the One who gave you the soul, that's what yoga is. Do it in a royal way, it's called Raj Yoga. Do it in a graceful way, then it's called Karma Yoga, Bhakti Yoga, Shakti Yoga... When you do it in an absolutely involved conscious way and you put your involved consciousness on the top of it, they call it Kundalini Yoga—uncoil yourself. You reveal yourself, you identify yourself. That is called Kundalini Yoga and Sikhs call it SAT NAM..."

—Yogi Bhajan, Nov. 30, 1988

"Kundalini Yoga is the science to unite the finite with Infinity and it's the art to experience Infinity in the finite. All those people who practice Kundalini Yoga don't have to have different definitions. This is it. It is straight. It is simple. It creates no complications."

Yogi Bhajan, Oct. 27, 1988

"What is the Kundalini? The creative potential of the man."

—Teachings of Yogi Bhajan, p. 177

empowering attitudes of thinking. It is on-the-job-training for success and excellence in life. It builds inner strength and self awareness so you can fulfill your highest potential.

In Kundalini Yoga we harness the mental, physical, and nervous energies of the body and put them under the domain of the will, which is the instrument of the soul. Kundalini Yoga perfects the finite life while connecting it to the Infinite experience.

3

Ong Namō Guru Dev Namō

Tuning In

We always tune in before doing any practice of Kundalini Yoga.

When you want to watch your favorite television show, you have to select the right channel. If you want to watch the World Series, you don't turn to the Home-Shopping channel. You get what you want by selecting the particular wavelength that is broadcasting the program you want to see.

The T.V. log has dozens of listings. All the T.V. stations broadcast simultaneously. Your screen shows only the particular one you have selected. Why? Because of the principle of attunement. You get the station or channel you want by tuning to the correct frequency. When you use the right "call letters" you get the channel you want. This same principle governs the science of mantra.

Tuning in is simply changing channels on the television of your mind.

MANTRA

We live in a sea of energy. Energy vibrates. There's a particular vibratory frequency corresponding to every sound in the universe. By vibrating a particular combination of sounds (syllables), you tune-in to various levels of intelligence or consciousness. You're choosing programs all the time, whether you know it or not.

Consciously or unconsciously, purposely or at random, you personally choose the programs that play on the screen of your mind by the thoughts you think (vibrate) and the words you speak (vibrate).

Mantras are combinations of syllables consciously constructed to connect with specific levels of intelligence. Using a mantra is like dialing a phone number. If you want to talk with your friend in Florida, you don't call the San Diego Zoo.

The knowledge of the meaning and power of sounds and the use of the sound current is contained in the ancient technology of Mantra Yoga. It is a major factor in the practice of Kundalini Yoga.

Spirituality cannot be taught, it has to be caught, like the measles.

We've already said that Kundalini Yoga is a sacred science. It is a spiritual practice. "Spirituality" is contagious. You have to get it from someone who's got it. That's why we start each class by "tuning in" to the wavelength of the teachers who've "got it"—so we can receive their vibration. The mantra we use to accomplish this is ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO. These code letters not only invoke the blessing of your own highest self, but they open the protective link between you and the long line of Spiritual Masters who have preceded us on the path. This transmitting of higher consciousness from Master to disciple which has been going on for thousands of years is sometimes called the "golden chain." Yogi Bhajan, Master of Kundalini Yoga, is the immediate connection to this chain for all of us who practice Kundalini Yoga.

ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO is chanted (vibrated) to assure the purest inner guidance for your practice of Kundalini Yoga.

Here's how to turn the dial of your mind and switch to the channel that will give you the clearest reception for the technology of Kundalini Yoga, and the elevated consciousness (vibration) that comes with it. I'm going to explain this in great detail, because it's really important that you get started correctly from the very beginning.

Ready? Get set:

Sit with your spine straight. Preferably sit cross-legged on the floor (use a mat, folded blanket, or something firm for padding). In yogic terms, this cross-legged position is called Sukh Asan which translates as “easy-pose,” though it may not be easy for you. If you can’t sit on the floor, you can sit on a chair, just make sure that both feet are planted firmly on the floor with weight equally balanced. Keep your spine straight. Place the palms of your hands flat together at the center of your chest, fingers pointing upward at a very slight angle outward. The sides of your thumbs press lightly but firmly at the center of the sternum. This pressure stimulates a nerve ending that goes up to the brain; we call it the “mind nerve.” This mudra (hand position) is called “Prayer Pose.” Not only does it make you look saintly (not a bad image), but it helps concentration. Being able to concentrate, being one-pointed, and able to keep your attention focused is not only useful for meditation; it also comes in handy for baking a cake, writing a symphony, or riding a bicycle. Successful completion of any job requires us to corral and harness the multitude of scattered thought fragments flying wildly about in our untrained minds.

Prayer Pose in Sukh Asan
(Easy Pose)

Keep the palms pressed firmly together. The palms contain nerve endings corresponding to the left and right hemispheres of the brain. Pressing them together helps to balance the logical hemisphere of the brain with the creative, intuitive hemisphere. This balance is important for successful concentration.

Pull your chin back slightly, to help straighten the spine, allowing freer movement of the Kundalini energy upwards.

ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO

"I Bow to the Creator, to the Divine Teacher Within."

- ONG means the Creator - the One Who created you.
- NAMO means reverent greetings, salutations.
- GURU is the giver of the technology, the Teacher.
Teacher: the one who gets rid of ignorance
GU = darkness, RU = light, that which dispels darkness.
- DEV means transparent (nonphysical).

Ready? Read the following instructions first, then close your eyes, keeping them focused at the center of your forehead and begin.

Take several long deep breaths, inhaling deeply through your nose, then exhaling completely out through the nose. Do this several times, then:

Inhale deeply through the nose, and vibrate the syllable ONG at the back of the throat and feel the sound going out through the nose.

Then slide into the sound NAMO (the NA is a short syllable, while the MO is extended. See pronunciation guide.) and complete the rest of the mantra, raising the pitch of the syllable DEV (which rhymes with "save") about a third-tone higher than the rest of the mantra.

Finish exhaling all the breath as you chant the final NAMO.

If you can do it, chant the entire mantra all in one breath without a pause. If you find you need to catch your breath slightly before chanting G'ROO (rhymes with "who"), you can take a quick sip of air through the mouth after Ong NamO, just as you do automatically when you are speaking, but don't inhale through the nose during the mantra. (Note, the syllable GU in Guru, is extremely brief.)

After each complete round, inhale very deeply through the nose before you chant the entire mantra again. Continue this sequence at least three times, breathing only through the nose. Continue chanting ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO as many more times as you wish until you feel “connected.” It is like letting the phone ring until someone picks up.

There is a basic melody we usually use, but the melody is not so important as the rhythm and the breath. This holds true for all mantras — the most important factors are the rhythm and the breath.

When you have finished chanting ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO, inhale deeply. Feel yourself being filled with energy, life, light and joy! Hold the breath as long as you can do so comfortably. Then exhale completely, feeling the breath carrying away tension and fatigue. Feel yourself getting rid of worry or disease. Take a few more of these long deep breaths, using each breath as a self-healing meditation. There are many powerful meditations, but there is nothing more powerful than meditation on the breath.

Let me repeat: Always remember to chant ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO at least three times before you begin each session of Kundalini Yoga. Be conscious of the important meaning of the mantra while you are chanting so that it does not become a mere ritual.

ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO is such a valuable mantra that Yogi Bhajan had a forty-five minute tape of it made with continuous chanting by Niranjan Kaur. We often meditate or chant along with it during yoga classes, and it's used frequently for meditation in White Tantric Yoga video courses. The beautiful melody on this tape is different from the original.

IMPORTANT CONCEPTS:

1. There is nothing more powerful than meditation on your breath.
2. Chanting is not singing. It is not speaking. It is vibrating.
3. To make any mantra more effective, chant from your navel point.

4

Breath of Life

HOW TO BREATHE (DON'T I ALREADY KNOW HOW?)

We give our children piano lessons, we eagerly encourage them to walk and talk, but how many of us train them to breathe? Did your parents teach you? The good news is that we are born with enough built-in breathing skill to keep us alive. The bad news is that until we learn to breathe consciously, we're only "half-alive." We're like champion racing cars that never get out of first gear.

INSPIRATION—ASPIRATION: RESPIRATION !

Some of the most profound truths, the "secrets" of the universe, are contained in the most simple, basic facts of life. Breathing is one of these secrets. It is so fundamental, it seems so natural and effortless, we usually take it for granted. We don't realize its tremendous significance and potential power.

It is well known that you can go without food for weeks. You can survive without water for days. But a very few minutes without breath and you're dead. We all know this, so what's the point?

The point is that your entire future, your life itself, totally depends upon whether or not you receive your next inhalation. Nothing is more important to you than that next inhalation. Yet there is absolutely no guarantee that you're going to get it. Your guaranteed life expectancy is literally only one breath! All your wealth, all your possessions, all your relationships, power, prestige, hopes, and plans are useless unless you are breathing.

That is why the first principle in Kundalini Yoga is:

Value Your Breath

Each breath is given to you. "You" are not breathing; something is breathing in you. Think about it. From the moment you were born, up to this very moment in time, twenty-four hours every day, seven days a week, 365 days a year—no holidays, no vacations, no time off; whether you are awake or asleep, conscious or unconscious, happy or unhappy; something breathes in you, keeping you alive.

Here comes a most significant thought: Some people call that amazing power, energy, or force that breathes in you: "GOD." Yes, it is true, the One Universal Intelligence that Generates, Organizes, and then Delivers or Destroys all creation is precisely what is breathing in each of us.

Hold on a minute, are we talking about religion here? No! Definitely not. Religion is how you choose (if you choose) to worship That-Which-Breathes-in-You.

Breath is the delicate thread that links you, the creature, to the One who created this entire universe (including you and me). Each inhalation you receive is a reminder, a reaffirmation of that divine presence in you.

"If there is anything Divine in you, it's your breath."

—Yogi Bhajan

In the Orient, it is said that when a child is born, the life-span is already predetermined, premeasured, preordained and predestined—not by years, but by the number of breaths allotted. Therefore, we can conclude, and rightfully so, if you breathe slower, you will live longer. You will also live healthier. A slower rate of breathing is much easier on the nervous system, the metabolism, and the digestion.

The rate and rhythm of the breath are intimately connected to our mental and emotional states. In fact, just as the emotions and the mind cause the breath to vary, by consciously controlling the breath we can gain control over the mind and the emotions. By slowing down the breath, we calm the mind and cool down our emotional energy.

The average rate of breathing for most people is about fifteen times per minute. When the rate of breathing increases, or if it becomes rapid and irregular, the mind also becomes disturbed and erratic. We already know this instinctively. In a movie, when we hear someone gasping, breathing heavily, even if we can't see them, we feel the tension, we assume they're upset. When we want to know if the baby is asleep, we listen for slow, even breathing.

PRANA AND THE AIR

Yes, breath is life, but it isn't the air we breathe that keeps us alive. It is the subtle essence of the breath, carried to us by the air, that contains our life energy. This life energy is called prana. The prana that we receive with each breath is the same energy that was released when scientists split the atom. It is nothing new.

For thousands of years the yogis have worked with prana. Yogic breathing exercises are called pranayam. Prana is the basic building block of the universe. It is given to us with each inhalation. What could be more powerful?

When a person dies, the body still contains air. But the prana, the divine life force, has been withdrawn.

Incoming breath of life is PRANA.

Outgoing breath is called APANA.

More about apana later.

Principles to remember:

1. Your rate of breathing and your state of mind are inseparable.
2. The slower your rate of breathing, the more control you have over your mind.

Another principle to remember — especially later on when we talk about relaxation, is:

3. The mind follows the breath, and the body follows the mind.

PRANAYAM: CONSCIOUS BREATHING

My very first class with Yogi Bhajan consisted entirely of slow, long, deep breathing. He told me to lie down flat on my back on the floor (fortunately there was a mat) and start inhaling and exhaling as deeply as possible through my nose. Then he left the room! Forty-five minutes later he returned. That was my introduction to Kundalini Yoga.

Yogi Bhajan didn't give me any technical, detailed instructions. He just said to lie straight, keep my arms at my sides and breathe long and deep through the nose — consciously. Conscious breathing means focusing your attention on each inhalation and exhalation. It's a very different experience from simply letting the breath "happen" as we do most of the time.

The most fundamental yogic breathing technique is simply Long Deep Breathing.

LONG DEEP BREATHING

What is the effect of Long Deep Breathing? It will calm the mind, balance the emotions, and harmonize body, mind, and spirit. It is used in meditation, and in the practice of yoga exercises. Long Deep Breathing can be used in everyday situations where you want to be in control of your emotions, able to think clearly and act effectively. Remember, the slower you breathe, the calmer your mind. Used in conjunction with positive affirmation, Long Deep Breathing becomes a very dynamic self-healing tool.

So, let's do it! Sit up straight, or you can even lie down flat on your back. Close your eyes. Tune in with ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO. (See Tuning In.) The main requirement is that the spine must not be bent anywhere; it must be straight. We're going to use Long Deep Breathing as the pranayam with a Meditation for Universal Wisdom. (See facing page.)

You can use Long Deep Breathing as a guided meditation for many aspects of self-healing. Choose your own list of qualities to meditate on and consciously receive and accept whatever concept you choose with each inhalation. Then release, or let go of the opposite quality with each exhalation. For example:

INHALE	EXHALE
health	disease
strength	weakness
energy	fatigue
faith	fear
peace	tension

MEDITATION FOR UNIVERSAL WISDOM

To focus your energy on the quality of wisdom, with your hands resting on your knees (palms can be up or down), curl your forefingers and capture the tip of the nail of the forefingers with the pad of the first joint of your thumbs. The other three fingers of each hand are straight and close together. Your arms are straight, with no bend in the elbows, but they are not rigid. Your body is like a pyramid, balanced, symmetrical, and stable. The majestic yogi!

Inhale deeply through your nose. Feel as though you are pulling the breath down into your navel center. As the breath then starts to fill the lungs, your diaphragm will expand. You can think of the abdominal area as a balloon. Keep inhaling until your lungs have taken in all they can hold. Your chest will be expanded.

Keep track of the breath and feel it as it comes in and goes out. Breathe deeply, feel the breath going all the way down to the navel point. When you exhale, empty the lungs completely.

Use your total lung capacity, make every inhale and every exhale as long and full and complete as you can. It will soon take greater concentration to maintain the depth of the breath — because as the breath slows down, the mind slows down also, and tends to put you to sleep. (This principle comes in handy when you want to go to sleep at night. We'll talk more about this in the chapter on Sleep.) Try to stay alert and continue to make each breath full and deep.

Keep your abdominal muscles relaxed during long deep breathing. The abdomen will move naturally with the breath. It's the diaphragm that's doing all the work. Consciously feel yourself taking in and absorbing universal wisdom with each inhalation, and getting rid of doubt and confusion with each exhalation.

Continue for three minutes. See how peaceful and mentally clear you feel after only three minutes! Of course, you can do long deep breathing for longer periods of time (eleven minutes, thirty-one minutes, or more), but as usual, we recommend moderation. Begin with short sessions and gradually increase your time.

It seems so simple, but believe me, it works! You already have that infinite creative flow of eternal power within you. This is one way to use it. Keep remembering that breath is life, and therefore breath can rejuvenate and regenerate.

CORPSE POSE

You can do Long Deep Breathing (or any pranayam) lying flat on your back, keeping your body in a straight line, arms down at your sides, palms facing up. Then you can tell your friends you mastered one of the Hatha Yoga Asanas (postures)! It is called Corpse Pose. This position gives optimum support to the spine (which has all 72,000 nerves attached to the twenty-six main vertebrae) and allows the free-flowing of energy throughout the body.

LINKING THE BREATH WITH MANTRA

One of the simplest but nevertheless most powerful ways to meditate on the breath is to think the sound "SAT" with every inhalation and think the sound "NAM" with every exhalation. Hear the syllables in your mind. (Suuuuuuuuut... rhymes with "but," Naaaaaaaam, rhymes with "calm.") Mentally create these sounds. Take your time. Take ten long, deep, full breaths, meditating on each breath with the infinite sound of SAT NAM.

Why do we use those particular syllables? SAT NAM instantly attunes us to our highest Self. SAT NAM affirms that "Truth is our Identity." It translates as: "Truth is God's Name." We'll talk much more about mantra later, meanwhile, a little explanation about a big concept:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."¹
SAT NAM

SAT NAM is a Bij Mantra, or "seed sound." SAT means Truth, the ultimate, unchanging, Universal Truth. NAM means name, or identity. When we say "SAT NAM" to each other, we are acknowledging our mutual divine identity. And, at least for that brief moment, we are united, "one in the spirit." There are no barriers, no walls of fear or separation between us. By using Sat Nam as a greeting

(I even have it on my voice mail) we have attuned ourselves to our highest consciousness, at least for a moment. After that we can decide to disagree about anything we want! But at least we have established a basis of communication that is in total harmony and acceptance. I think it's called love.

EXPAND YOUR LUNG CAPACITY

When your mind is calm, meditative, and under your control, your rate of breathing will be slow, steady and calm. So, it is logical that by breathing slowly and steadily you will calm your mind. Yes, to repeat, it's a fact: As you change your rate of breathing, you change your state of mind. To breathe more slowly, it is necessary to have a larger lung capacity. One of the first things we work on is increasing the lung capacity. The fastest way to achieve that is by practicing Breath of Fire.

SAT NAM

BREATH OF FIRE

Here is a pranayam that will not only increase your lung capacity (so you can easily breathe slower and deeper) but it will also:

- Strengthen your nervous system
- Purify your bloodstream
- Energize, stimulate, and wake you up!
- Increase your vitality

This pranayam is called Breath of Fire. It is one of the first things I teach my beginning students. I want to teach it to you right now. So please "Tune In" with ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO, and we'll be ready to begin.

Let us sit properly like yogis, in Sukhasan, easy cross-legged pose. If you become too uncomfortable, try sitting on your heels (Vajra Asan — Rock Pose), or sit in a chair, or lie on the floor. The main thing is you are going to BREATHE CONSCIOUSLY, with your spine straight.

Interlace your fingers in your lap. Ideally, apply "Venus Lock." Venus Lock will help you contain the increased energy from the additional prana that you are going to bring into your body when you do Breath of Fire.

Look at the illustration carefully. Note that the thumbs are not crossed. The hand position is opposite for males and females. (Female lock illustrated.) The tip of one thumb is pressing firmly into the web between the thumb and forefinger of the other hand, while the opposite thumb is pressing the fleshy mound between the thumb and the wrist. Make sure to alternate the fingers. You don't want to have two fingers from the same hand next to each other.

Venus Lock

HOW TO DO BREATH OF FIRE

Breath of Fire is simply a rapid and powerful breath through the nose. To learn it, be sure your spine is straight, keep your mouth closed, and breathe rapidly through the nose. Inhalation and exhalation will be about equal. (It is not the Hatha Yoga breath "Bastrika" which emphasizes the exhalation and focuses on the lower stomach muscles.)

Inhale and lift your chest and hold it still. Exhale and pull in on your navel. Note that the upper abdominals and the diaphragm move as the navel point pulls in. The breath is powered from the navel to the diaphragm. In the beginning, you may find it helpful to think primarily about the exhalation which is synchronized with the pulling in of the navel.

Listen to the sound of your breath.

Imagine that you are making the sound track for a film showing twenty-seven steam engines going uphill.

Start out slowly as you're learning, until you get used to the rhythm and can easily coordinate the breath with the movement of your navel point. Then pick up speed until you're breathing approximately 120 to 180 times per minute.

Listen to the sound of your breath. Imagine that you are making the sound track for a film showing twenty-seven steam engines going uphill. On each exhalation, pull your navel point in toward the back of your spine. On each inhalation, release it. Don't pause in between. When Breath of Fire is done correctly, it is an easy breath. The muscles dance in rhythm and you stay energized rather than becoming tired.

Breath of Fire is not hyperventilation. In hyperventilation, the breathing is deep and erratic. The upper chest is not held suspended, and usually people are "chest breathing" or they may be reverse breathing, in other words exhaling with the navel pushed out instead of pulled in.

Continue Breath of Fire, breathing rapidly and continuously in and out without pausing, for about thirty seconds for your first practice session. Keep your shoulders relaxed, keep your face relaxed. Allow yourself to do Breath of Fire without tension. Keep your spine straight, but not rigid.

Do not inhale or exhale through your mouth to catch your breath. If you should start to feel you are running out of breath and you think you must stop, simply take a few long, slow, deep breaths through your nose until you feel ready to resume. Then try again.

Don't pause or hold your breath on either the inhalation or exhalation. Breath of Fire is one continuous breath. Even though it may seem like a lot of inhalations and exhalations, it is considered to be all one breath, from the time you start, to the time you stop. That is why it is so marvelously effective in calming your mind. (The slower the breath, the calmer the mind.) When you do Breath of Fire for even just one minute, the

If I were writing a commercial for Breath of Fire, I'd say:

Are your nerves "frayed"?
Do you fly off the handle at the slightest provocation?

TRY THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL PRANAYAM:
"BREATH OF FIRE"

- Breath of Fire virtually insulates your nerves. It coats them with an invisible but powerful protective pranic cushion that can last for days.
- Practiced regularly, Breath of Fire is guaranteed by the Yogis to end any embarrassing temper tantrum habit.
- Amaze your friends and family with your calm, serene disposition.

Well, you get the idea. Breath of Fire does wonders for strengthening your 72,000 nerves and because it expands your lung capacity, enabling you to breathe slowly, it activates your intuition.

effect is as if you had taken only one breath during that whole minute! Breathing less than four times per minute puts you into a meditative state. Furthermore, breathing slowly increases the flow of your inner intuitive guidance.

BREATH AND INTUITION

Here's how it works: When you breathe less than eight times per minute, you stimulate the secretion of your pituitary gland. Not only is the pituitary the master gland of the body, but it is also the gateway, the control panel for your intuition. The more your pituitary secretes, the more active and accessible your intuition becomes. This means that you become more aware of actions you need to take. You will find your inner guidance, that direct, instantaneous awareness of "simply knowing," becoming more frequent, stronger, and clearer. Through Kundalini Yoga meditations you will also learn how to use your meditative mind and how to call upon your intuition at will.

PHYSICAL EFFECTS

Breath of Fire is a cleansing and purifying breath, so if you are doing Breath of Fire for the first time, you may notice some physical effects. Especially if your bloodstream is holding a lot of toxins, you may feel slightly giddy or dizzy in the process. Don't worry about it, just keep on breathing. It may be uncomfortable but it is not harmful. You are simply feeling the poisons coming to the surface where they can be eliminated.

In any cleansing process (such as a very strict cleansing diet or fast) you may feel weak at first, possibly even a little worse than before you started. By continuing, you will get rid of those toxins that would otherwise stay locked up inside your body until some fine day they decide to reveal themselves, when you "get sick."

Other symptoms can occur when you start doing Breath of Fire. You may feel heat or cold inside your nostrils. You may feel a pressure at the root of the nose. Some people feel "itchy" or tingly. Some people feel none of the above. The various sensations are incidental, temporary adjustments made by your body. Ignore them. Breath of Fire generates a lot of heat so it warms up the body. (Try it on a cold day!) Since it usually increases your circulation, women should not practice Breath of Fire during their monthly period.

You can make Breath of Fire even more powerful by adding the mantra (mentally hearing the sounds), Wahe Guru, Wahe Guru, Wahe Guru... (pronounced Waa Hay G'roo—see Pronunciation Guide) repeated rapidly over and over in rhythm with your breath. Wahe Guru means “Wow, God is Great!” It is a mantra of ecstasy. Or you can silently repeat the Bij Mantra, SAT NAM, six times, “Sat Nam, Sat Nam, Sat Nam, Sat Nam, Sat Nam, Sat Nam,” then add: Wahe Guru! to each cycle.

SAT NAMSAT NAM*SAT NAM*SAT NAM*SAT NAM*SAT NAM*WAHE GURU

HOMEWORK ASSIGNMENT

Be kind to yourself. Start practicing Breath of Fire on a regular basis. Every single day, sit down with a watch or a timer, and simply do it. Give yourself five minutes every day, starting with 30-second segments. Take a few long, deep breaths in-between when you need to. Keep practicing! Work your way up to longer segments each day and by the end of a week you will be able to do Breath of Fire comfortably for two minutes without stopping. Of course, practice on an empty stomach! You don't want to eat anything within one hour before any session, and eat only very lightly within two hours prior to doing Kundalini Yoga.

Breath of Fire is a very important factor in many Kundalini Yoga exercises, so PRACTICE, PRACTICE, PRACTICE! Discover how energizing it is, and how good it makes you feel!

TWO NOSTRILS ARE BETTER THAN ONE !

We've talked about the breath and its relationship to our state of mind. We've learned the two most fundamental pranayams: Breath of Fire, the pranayam that strengthens the nervous system and expands your lung capacity, and Long Deep Breathing.

Now let's talk about why you have two nostrils and then learn how to use them individually.

Your body temperature is regulated by the flow of the prana through alternate nostrils. They function somewhat like an air-conditioning unit and a furnace, turning on and off, switching back and forth from heating to cooling every two and a half hours, keeping your temperature normal and your energies in balance.

Your pituitary gland — the master gland of the body — serves as the thermostat to control the switches. The left nostril draws in the cooling, soothing, mind-expanding energy of the moon. It is the “water” element. The right nostril draws on the sun’s energy. This is for vitality, activity, and mental alertness; it heats the body. You can experiment right now and find out which of your nostrils is working. Place a finger underneath your nose and gently exhale. You will discover that the air is flowing mostly out of only one nostril.

The right nostril controls our energy level and the left controls our emotions. Consequently, if we are tired, breathing long and deep through the right nostril will give us added energy. Breathing through the left nostril can calm us down when we are upset and emotional, angry, frightened, or just generally disturbed.

Although your body has its own rhythm for automatically alternating nostrils for breathing, there are times when you will benefit from consciously controlling this function. Many pranayams use one, both, or alternate nostrils, depending upon the effect desired.

LEFT NOSTRIL BREATHING: CALM DOWN AND COOL OFF

If you’re upset, angry, agitated, mentally/emotionally disturbed, or just plain moving too fast and feeling pressured and stressed out, try this:

Find a private place where no one will disturb you, and take five minutes for this pranayam.

Sit with your spine straight. Using the thumb of the right hand, keeping the other fingers together and pointing straight upward like antennae, close your right nostril. Begin long deep breathing in and out through the left nostril only.

TWENTY-SIX long deep breaths through the left nostril will do the job. When you are calm, then you can decide how to deal with whatever situation requires your action, because you won't be triggered into any emotional knee-jerk response.

ALTERNATE NOSTRIL BREATHING: ENERGIZE AND CALM THE NERVOUS SYSTEM

Here's a breathing technique using alternate nostrils to soothe and calm and at the same time energize your whole nervous system. It works because the energy of your nervous system is directly proportional to your breath.

In only three to five minutes you can revitalize your whole nervous system. This particular technique can come in handy when you feel "off-center" and yet have to function at your job, or in school, or at home. Suppose you have an important business meeting scheduled but you're feeling extremely nervous and irritable. This pranayam can help you calm down so you can be effective in your communication at that meeting. Here's how:

Sit comfortably with your spine straight. Use your thumb and index finger of the right hand. Make a "U" of your thumb and forefinger. Use the thumb to close off the right nostril while breathing in or out through the left nostril, and the index finger to close off the left nostril while breathing in or out through the right nostril. Keep your other hand in your lap, or resting on your left knee.

The breath sequence goes like this:

Close the left nostril; inhale deeply through the right nostril. At the completion of inhalation, close the right nostril and exhale through the left one. Now inhale through the left nostril fully and deeply. Then close the left nostril and exhale through the right one. Again, inhale through the right nostril and exhale through the left. Continue this breathing pattern for three to five minutes.

Breathe fully on both inhalation and exhalation cycles. After three to five minutes, inhale deeply, hold the breath in for a few seconds, then lower the hand and exhale through both nostrils. Relax and feel great!

"THE ONE MINUTE YOGI"

Catch yourself breathing!

When you're walking down the street, sitting in a restaurant, opening your mail, waiting for the light to change, during the TV commercial— catch yourself breathing! Wake up to the fact that you are breathing and therefore you are alive. Remember WHO is giving you each inhalation, and say "Thank You!"

Meditation on the breath is one of the highest forms of meditation.
Never Underestimate The Power of Your Breath.

PRANA

*God is not off somewhere
Inaccessible and far.
Each inhalation confirms God's presence in you Right here, right now, right where you are.*

*Why should Truth between man and God
Not be spoken aloud?
What is that lie man told to man
To keep him from feeling proud?—*

*Proud of the God
Who breathes within —
Divine Being of Light
Covered with skin.*

*When a body "dies" there's still air inside
What's gone is PRANA, essence of life itself,
Can't be bought with the greatest wealth.*

*Prana, subtle essence of God
Primal energy released when the atom was split
Basic building block of the universe
All human life depends on it.*

*God's loving gift of life constantly renewed,
Power to hear and see and say—
How you choose to use it liberates or condemns you
Moment to moment, every day.*

*Take away Prana,
Only a shell remains
No matter what wealth
Or material gains.*

*Breathe slowly, breathe deeply
Your mind will be calm
Besides, you'll live longer
And seldom be wrong.*

*Value your breath, it's sacred, it's pure
If there's anything Divine in you — it's your breath for sure!*

5

Mantra

"Magic Words"

HISTORY. MYTH. LEGEND

One story I read when I was a child told about a beautiful princess who was held prisoner in a tower. She gained her freedom by guessing the name of her captor. (It was "Rumplestiltskin," in case you've forgotten.) Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves found the treasure cave by saying the magic words, "Open sesame," whereupon a hidden door miraculously appeared. These words were, in effect mantras. It's no fairy tale, it's a fact, when you know the "magic" words, you can find the hidden treasure!

The scientific use of sound to affect consciousness is called Mantra Yoga. Next to breathing (necessary for any endeavor), the use of Mantra is the most important aspect of the practice of Kundalini Yoga.

"MAN" means mind. "TRA" means to tune the vibration (just as one tunes the strings of a guitar). Mantra is a sound current which tunes and controls mental vibration. It is the "directive psyche," a word or words, combinations of syllables, which help focus the mind. Such words have enormous power.

"What does it mean to master a mantra? When you have repeated it so much, so often, and so well that you hear it within your being, and it comes handy to you — especially at the moment of death — you have mastered a mantra."¹

"Mantram siddhyam, siddhyam Parameshwaram."

He who masters mantra, masters God Himself.

Claims for mantras may seem like miracles, but mantras are actually formulas that work according to physical and metaphysical laws.

"Repeating a mantra (aloud) restructures the patterns in the mind that allow experience. Silence makes you aware of the many experiences in the mind."²

GOOD VIBES !

We live in a sea of energy. Energy vibrates. Everything in the manifest creation is vibrating. Even seemingly solid, inanimate objects are constantly vibrating. They are simply vibrating at a slower or lower frequency than animate objects. Some vibrations are audible, they are sounds we can hear with our ears. Thoughts are silent sounds, electromagnetic vibrations. The higher the frequency, the less dense and more etheric the quality of the vibrations we hear and speak, the more our own vibrational frequency is raised. Raising our own vibration brings us closer to experiencing and merging with the highest vibration of all, GOD, the original cause of the creativity of the universe.

Our entire universe was built on sound, on vibration. Putting it poetically: God spoke, and the world came into being. Or, more precisely, God vibrated, and all the universes and worlds, solar systems, oceans, land, and sky, and the myriad of beings that inhabit them appeared.

There's a vibratory frequency that corresponds to everything in the universe. By vibrating a particular combination of sounds, you tune in to various levels of intelligence, or consciousness. Situations, people, and events respond to the signals you send out. The vibratory frequency of a mantra draws to you whatever you are vibrating. You are like a magnet attracting vibrations to you by what you send out.

Chanting mantras, either silently or aloud, is a conscious method of controlling and directing your mind. Happiness or sorrow, joy or regret are vibratory frequencies in the mind. We can call them attitudes, or beliefs, but fundamentally, they are vibratory frequencies or thought waves. They determine the kind of program our mind “plays.” Which scenario we choose to hold on to becomes our vibration, defines how we feel and what we project to others. We can exercise our right to choose at any time.

When we chant a mantra we are choosing to invoke the positive power contained in those particular syllables. Whether it’s for prosperity, peace of mind, increasing intuition, or any of the other multitude of possible benefits inherent in mantras, simply by chanting them we are setting vibrations into motion that shall have an effect. It doesn’t actually matter if we understand the meaning of the sounds or not.

We are creating with every word we speak, and even with every word we think. Words are like boomerangs, every vibration we send out shall come back to us sooner or later. We get what we tune in to.

YOUR PERSONAL MANTRA

Some people think they need a personal mantra. Actually whatever mantra you chant becomes your personal mantra! As the Master of Kundalini Yoga himself has said:

“The word ‘mantra’ means mental vibration to the infinite mind. It’s a direct connection between God and you. Mantra is personal. It affects us personally. Its vibrations are personal. Because, if it is your heartline telephone, and you’re dialing it, and you’re reaching God, it’s not mine, and it’s not anybody else’s. It’s yours.”³

“The conversation of the mind with the soul is the essence of mantra. Mantra means to project and protect the mind. It gives the mind direction... When language and rhythm blend to instill a thought at the deepest level, it is a powerful mantra. It is sacred speech. It is a special use of language.”⁴

“Day by day in every way,
I’m getting better and better.”

THE POWER OF POSITIVE THINKING WORKS

Dr. Emil Coue created a major sensation in the early part of the twentieth century when his affirmation, “Day by day in every way, I’m getting better and better," became the rage. The concept of positive thinking seemed revolutionary! Dr Normal Vincent Peale reached millions of people with his famous best seller, The Power of Positive Thinking. Dale Carnegie applied these same principles in his How to Win Friends and Influence People. These men discovered and taught the creative power of words. The yogis understood this power very well.

In yogic terms, positive thinking is the substitution of a positive thought wave in the mind for a negative one. Positive affirmation is a form of mantra. Positive words can heal, uplift, and inspire. The other side of the coin is that careless, unkind, negative words can hurt. Words are like sharp tools, which people can use like a surgeon's scalpel to save a life, or a butcher knife to kill.

It's been said, "The pen is mightier than the sword."⁵ Each word we think or say literally starts a creative process in the universe. Don't underestimate your power of the Word. Be careful what you say. In fact, be especially careful what you pray for, you're liable to get it!

WHY DON'T WE CHANT IN ENGLISH?

Sometimes we do. However, to achieve the greatest impact on our consciousness, we use mantras in Gurbani, a language based on the science of NAAD. These mantras are the most effective. Affirmations and mantras in English certainly have an effect on our minds and emotions, but the most profound changes in our consciousness take place on a much deeper level. The actual chemistry of the brain has to change for us to experience Infinity.

THE SCIENCE OF NAAD

"Naad means harmony, a process of harmony through which the "Aad," the Infinity, can be experienced. Naad is the basic sound for all languages through all times. This sound comes from one common source called the sound current. It is the universal code behind language and therefore behind human communication.

"The Science of Naad works between the movement of the tongue in the mouth, through language, and chemicals in the brain. There is no nerve connecting system from one section of the brain to another. There is no wiring, instead there is a solution, neuro-transmission fluid. Different chemical liquids are secreted from all different parts of the brain. Messages are transmitted very fast from each part of the brain through the fluids which are called "Naad Namodam Rasaa." Naad means communication, namodam means addressing and rasaa means juice..."⁶

COMBINATION LOCK

In addition to the vibrations set in motion, something else happens when you chant. This is really important. There are eighty-four meridian points, or pressure points in the roof of the mouth. Every time you speak you stimulate them with the tongue. By stimulating these pressure points on the upper palate in a particular sequence, using the right access code, you increase the secretion of the hypothalamus gland and actually bring about a change in the permutation and combination of your brain cells. You affect the chemistry of the brain. When giving instructions for chanting certain mantras, Yogi Bhajan has been specific in saying, "Use the tip of your tongue."

"You can feel the upper palate with the tongue and experience its different surfaces. There are two rows of meridian points on the upper palate and on the gum behind the upper teeth. The tongue stimulates those meridian points, and they in turn stimulate the hypothalamus which makes the pineal gland radiate. When the pineal gland radiates, it creates an impulsation in the pituitary gland. When the pituitary gland gives impulsation, the entire glandular system secretes and a human being obtains bliss. This is the science."⁷

It's as if you have an electronic, computerized security system in your mouth. Punch in the right code on the upper palate and you gain entry to the brain and your inner chambers of higher consciousness!

When we chant, we are also using prana, the life force of the universe ("atomic energy") to create a sound current. No wonder chanting is so powerful.

TECHNICAL TERMS

(in case you're interested)

KINDS OF SOUND

We usually think of sound as audible but sound can also be subtle. It can be vibrated with one part of you, or with your whole self.

The yogis define several distinct kinds of sound or shabd.

- BHAKREE: Using the tip of the tongue to form the syllables aloud is called "Bhakree." It is the easiest way to chant.

- KHANT: This is the sound current that you hear in your mind when you read silently, without moving your lips. It is subliminal vocalization. The "sound" is silent, but the syllables vibrate at your Throat Chakra (Fifth Center of Consciousness).

- HARDAY: This is the sound current that vibrates in the heart. This is how a mother can "hear" the voice of her wounded son crying out from the battlefield six thousand miles away.

- ANAHAT: This sound current is sometimes called the "Unstruck Melody." It is when the mantra resounds in every atom and fiber of your being; every nerve is attuned to it. Its vibration becomes a part of you. It is an inner sound. It is created when the sound is produced from the navel center (Nabhee) using the tip of the tongue. This combination triggers the higher glands to produce the "nectar of bliss," amrit.

Because of its power, the science of mantra was kept a carefully guarded secret in the Orient for thousands of years, but Yogi Bhajan has openly taught the "secret code" words and the technology to open the doors of our inner perception. His attitude is, "What is that Truth between God and man which cannot be spoken aloud?"

In the Things To Do section you will find the mantras I've selected to share with you, with detailed instructions on how to chant them for the best results.

6

Conquer the Mind, You Conquer the World¹

"Mind your own business"

"Mind your manners"

"Mind over matter"

"Never mind..."

"Mind your mother!"

"I don't mind if I do..."

Contrary to popular belief, your mind is not you. Your identity is much more permanent than that. Think how often your mind changes (or you "change your mind"). But your identity doesn't change. You're still "you," no matter what your mind is thinking, planning, advising, or arguing about.

Just as your physical body is not "you," neither is your mind. It is equally a vehicle, to help you function here on earth. It's supposed to be your useful servant, your friend, not your boss!

Have you ever watched your mind? It can be a very educational experience! The very fact that "you" can watch your mind demonstrates that the mind is not you. The mind is something separate from you, an "object" that you can observe.

Mastering the mind is one of the aims of Kundalini Yoga (or any yoga) because until you can control the mind, you can't get beyond it to liberation. Liberation is the experience of your own infinity, and lies beyond the mind.

That doesn't mean that you throw away the mind, or destroy it, or suppress it. In fact, you want to make the mind sharper, clearer, and even more useful than ever.

"The mind becomes a monster when it becomes your master. The mind is an angel when it is your servant."

You can use the breath to control the mind, for the mind always follows the breath and the body follows the mind. Self-mastery starts with the breath. If you haven't already done so, please go back and read the chapter on breath. And look up the Basic Breath Series that is especially recommended to help make the mind sharp and clear.

—Yogi Bhajan

THREE MINDS ARE BETTER THAN ONE

CONSCIOUS MINDS

You actually have three minds (no wonder sometimes it's so hard to "make up your mind"). Count 'em:

1. The first mind is your protector, it acts as an alarm system. It is called the Negative Mind. It warns you of the danger or disadvantage in any upcoming situation or decision. It's valuable. You need it. It's the mind that keeps you from stepping in front of moving trains. But you don't want to make it the final authority in your life. When carried to extremes it could make you afraid of trains that are standing still.

2. The second mind is the Positive Mind. This is the mind that reveals to you the possible gain or advantage you can get out of a situation. It should start communicating with you within a few seconds, almost immediately after the Negative Mind has given its input. By all means listen to your Positive Mind, but don't act yet. After you receive all the pros and cons, you still don't know enough to make a decision, until you find out what your third mind has to say.

3. Your third mind is your Neutral Mind. It is not clouded by fear and insecurity. It's not fooled by wishful thinking. Its only bias is to provide the best, most conscious, wise solution to any problem. This is the mind you can trust. It has your best interests at heart (and in mind).

Whether it's in your business or personal relationships, health, or where to spend your vacation, in order to determine what's really best for you now and for the future, you not only need to be aware of what opinion is held by the Positive Mind and what opinion is held by the Negative Mind, you also need to consult your Neutral or Meditative Mind for a decision.

The practice of Kundalini Yoga helps to develop the Neutral or Meditative Mind so that it becomes more and more powerful and active and you can go to it very quickly for problem-solving advice .

SUB-CONSCIOUS MIND

In addition to your conscious mind, you also have a very active sub-conscious mind and deeper than that, a vast subterranean area of the unconscious.

The conscious mind is just the tip of the iceberg. Most of what motivates us is below the surface. A huge proportion of our behavior is dictated by promptings we get from the sub-conscious mind, which doesn't know fact from fiction. It is a catch-all for the verbal input and even the nonverbal input we receive constantly. It doesn't judge what it receives, and pretty much accepts everything as gospel, coloring our habits of thinking, speaking, and acting - with its limited understanding.

You can use the gullibility of the subconscious to heal yourself. If you repeat "I am perfectly healthy" over and over, even while you're running a fever of 103°, your subconscious will believe it and you will heal faster.

Whatever the subconscious mind believes, the body tends to manifest. "As above, so below." Another reason why positive affirmation works! But until we get rid of the fear and the neuroses in the subconscious we are very handicapped in our lives.

Think about an elephant. They say elephants never forget (neither do people). Have you ever wondered why a huge two thousand pound elephant will stand so obediently in one place, tied to a short stake in the ground, held only by a thin chain around its ankle? The elephant doesn't try to move, because he has been programmed to believe he can't.

How? Simple. The baby elephant is tied to the stake when he is very young. Whenever he tries to move, the chain bites into his leg. He can't get away, because he's not strong enough. Every time he tries to move, he gets hurt — a lot. The elephant very quickly catches on to the fact that moving is painful. In order to avoid getting hurt, he gives up trying. Even after he has grown to full size, and could easily tear out the chain, along with the post, and probably the whole circus tent, this gigantic, powerful elephant doesn't even try to get free, because he believes he can't.

Similarly, we let ourselves suffer from low self-esteem, think of ourselves as "sinners," and accept defeat or failure because our subconscious minds have accepted these false concepts. We believe things that we've been told, things we may not even consciously remember hearing.

You can go to a psychiatrist or psychologist and spend a lot of hours and a lot of dollars to sort through and examine the self-defeating attitudes in the subconscious. Or you can use the techniques of meditation and mantra, dissolve the pain, and just get rid of the garbage that is clogging up your subconscious mind.

WHERE DO THOUGHTS COME FROM?

The intellect releases one thousand thoughts per wink of the eye. Yes, everyone—genius, idiot, and the rest of us in between, each person gets one thousand thoughts every time he or she blinks! And these thoughts have to be processed.

WHERE DO THOUGHTS GO?

Each thought becomes either a

- Feeling
- Emotion or
- Desire

When your desires don't work out, you feel upset. When you don't have intuition to guide you, mostly you won't get your desires fulfilled. Unfulfilled desire becomes neurosis, and that can develop into psychosis.

All thoughts and feelings go into the subconscious. When that gets filled up to overflowing, the excess spills into the unconscious, and that becomes the source of nightmares for you. Once they fall into the unconscious, those attitudes, feelings, and habits are extremely difficult to reach to change or modify, much less eliminate. That is why it is so essential for sanity and survival to clear out the subconscious on a regular basis, to prevent that "overload" of thoughts and feelings going into the unconscious.

DEEP CLEANING IS NOT JUST FOR SPRING

Sadhana, the daily practice of meditation/mantra, is one of the best, most efficient housecleaning services for the subconscious corridors of your mind. Because sadhana is a cleansing process, you have to be prepared for the dust to fly. That's why meditating is not necessarily blissful. Old fears, buried anger, deep negative emotions are brought up to the surface by the process so that the power of the mantra can dissolve them. (One vibration dissolving/absorbing the other.) Otherwise they remain buried and become more deeply entrenched in your subconscious, or become a permanent part of your unconscious, causing you even greater suffering and unhappiness.

FOCUS ON MANTRA

When painful, negative thoughts and feelings come out, let them go on by. Keep bringing your mind back to focus on the mantra you are chanting. And keep on chanting! This is substituting the positive thought wave of the mantra for the negative thought waves in your mind. The high vibration of mantra, like a good detergent, dissolves the greasy, grimy, painful thought waves. It's a process. Go through it.

Supposing you're just sitting and worrying, or you wake up with doubt or fear in your mind. "You can, by your free will, create the thought that 'God is with me. God and me, me and God are One.' To every thought that comes, if you meet it with this thought, you will be plus, not minus....Because you and God together will be meeting the thought, and you will win."²

HOW TO WIN

Choose an affirmation or mantra (See Chapter on Mantra and also the Persian Wheel Mantra) to use whenever you catch your mind in a negative mode. Use it so much that it becomes "second nature" to you. Let that sound current carry away your worry or confusion, doubt or fear!

Here are two simple sample sound currents to clear your mind:

"GOD AND ME, ME AND GOD ARE ONE"

Be sure to affirm this with conscious acceptance that it's true!

"ANG SANG WAHE GURU"

(pronounced Ung Sung Waahay G'roo)

("God is in every limb, every part, every fiber of my being.")

7

Mysterious Kundalini

"Where there's mastery, there's no mystery."

—Yogi Bhajan

Kundalini energy is real. It is powerful, and it's flowing through your body right now. It feeds your entire nervous system. For centuries, knowledge about it was kept secret because of its tremendous power. Because of the secrecy and lack of accurate information, many false representations have been put forth by otherwise respectable, so-called authorities. Sometimes people have had spontaneous experiences of the kundalini energy rising, but have not had the preparation and understanding to properly integrate and use the energy. That is why Yogi Bhajan's teachings are so valuable and important. Under his guidance as master of Kundalini Yoga, working with the kundalini energy becomes simple, the raising of the kundalini happens very easily, and the positive integration of the talents inherent in the various chakras takes place almost automatically. Using his method of teaching, practically anyone can practice Kundalini Yoga. (If I can do it, anybody can.)

Let me repeat, raising the kundalini is relatively simple. Keeping it flowing so that all the energy centers (chakras) are open and balanced is more of a challenge. To understand the value of this, we need to know more about the chakras and especially the function of the pineal and pituitary glands. (See chapter on Chakras.) So, bear with me through this next "scientific" section. Learn how the glands, the chakras, and the "mysterious" kundalini all work together to impact your awareness. And you can learn some yogic terms.

First of all, the word kundalini (feminine gender) literally means, "the curl of the lock of hair of the beloved." It is a metaphor, a poetic way of describing the flow of energy and consciousness which already exists within each one of us. Since ancient times, sacred truths have been hidden from the common man by using symbols and metaphors to pass along the knowledge.

Have you ever noticed the symbol printed on the prescription you get from your doctor? It's called a "Caduceus." It represents the flow of kundalini energy. This ancient symbol of the medical profession shows two serpents intertwined around a staff. But, kundalini is not snakes! It's just that in mythology and folklore, serpents are often associated with wisdom, and the route the kundalini energy travels as it goes up and down the spine is serpentine. The Caduceus represents the rising of the kundalini energy through two nerve channels that intertwine around the central nerve of the spinal column.

These two nerves act as main conductors. One of them is called the Ida, the other, the Pingala. Each of them makes two and one-half turns around the central column of the spine (Shushmana), as they spiral upwards from the base of the spine. The kundalini energy they carry feeds the entire nervous system. The Ida and the Pingala conduct the basic positive and negative, solar and lunar energies of the body.

The Ida, the nerve which ends at the left nostril, brings in the cooling, soothing, mind-expanding energy of the moon. The Pingala, ending in the right nostril, brings in the stimulating, energizing, heating energy of the sun. In addition to the kundalini energy which is already flowing in us, there is a vast reservoir of untapped, or "dormant" kundalini stored under the fourth vertebra of the spinal column.

Through the practice of Kundalini Yoga, we stimulate and release this unused kundalini energy, and allow it (it is never forced) to rise up the central column of the spine until it reaches the top of the skull, activating the secretion of the pineal gland. This brings about a major change of consciousness. When this energy returns down the Ida and Pingala and activates and balances the various energy centers, there is a major change in the person's life. Although there are cases of the kundalini rising spontaneously, without purposeful spiritual practice, your reservoir of kundalini energy usually remains dormant throughout your entire life. It's like having a racing car and never getting out of first gear!

RAISING YOUR KUNDALINI

Raising your kundalini is not difficult. It happens so naturally when you practice Kundalini Yoga that you may not even recognize the actual moment that it happens. If you're expecting bells to ring, cannons to go off or lights to flash, forget it. Seeing visions, hearing sounds, having some physical sensation might sometimes happen, and could seem quite impressive, but it can also be very misleading. Such phenomena are not the goal of the practice of Kundalini Yoga. There may be no physical sign at all, or possibly just a very slight indication. In case you do experience such things, don't let yourself get sidetracked. They don't prove anything. They are not the criteria for whether the kundalini has risen. Yogi Bhajan calls them "glitter at the bottom of the ladder."¹

Swami Vivekananda said,

"Wherever there was any manifestation of what is ordinarily called supernatural power or wisdom, there a little current of kundalini must have found its way into the shushmana. Only, in the vast majority of such cases, people had ignorantly stumbled on some practice which set free a minute portion of the coiled up kundalini. All worship, consciously or unconsciously, leads to this end."²

The true test of whether kundalini has been raised is in the consistent character and noble behavior of an individual.

IS THE KUNDALINI DANGEROUS?

The Master answers:

"Is money dangerous? It is just an energy. Kundalini is a latent energy that can be used for total consciousness. The only dangerous thing is the person whose kundalini is raised properly. That person is totally conscious. He cannot be lied to or cheated or politically swayed. The kundalini is essential. As long as you practice a total discipline or a complete and balanced kriya, there is no difficulty. In Kundalini Yoga, you will notice that every meditation and kriya has some form of mantra in it. This ensures the channelization of the energy."³

CREATIVE POTENTIAL

"What is Kundalini? The energy of the glandular system combines with the nervous system to become more sensitive so that the totality of the brain perceives signals and interprets them, so that the effect of the sequence of the cause becomes very clear to the man. In other words, man becomes totally, wholesomely aware. That is why it is called the Yoga of Awareness. As all rivers end up in the same ocean, all yoga ends up by raising the kundalini in the man. What is the kundalini? The creative potential of the man."⁴

THE "DIVINE GLANDS"

PITUITARY

The pituitary gland, in addition to being the master gland of the body, also controls intuition. Sometimes called the "Third Eye," the sixth energy center of the body (Ajna or Ajna Chakra) involves the pituitary gland.

PINEAL

The pineal gland is associated with the seventh energy center, the Shashara Chakra, sometimes called the "Thousand Petalled Lotus," "Tenth Gate," "Gate Of Salvation," or "Crown Chakra." (The soft spot on the top of a newborn baby's head, the fontanel, is at the 7th center.)

SCIENTIFIC, TECHNICAL INFORMATION

(Good to know)

PINEAL

The pineal has several secretions that we in the West are just starting to learn about. Although, of course, the yogis have known its importance for thousands of years. One of the major functions of the pineal is to vibrate and control the nucleus projection of every cell of the body.

In most adults, the pineal gland is merely the size of a grain of wheat, while in young children it is about the size of a chick-pea. As most people get older, the pineal gland shrinks and its special secretion decreases. With the practice of Kundalini Yoga kriyas, the pineal gland can be softened, expanded and stimulated. It can grow to the size of an almond and begin again to secrete its consciousness-raising nectar. This special secretion is abundant in children.

CONSCIOUSNESS

All biological consciousness is chemical in nature. Our state of consciousness is controlled by the secretion of chemicals called neuro-humors, neurotransmitters, and blockers, in the various areas of the brain. "Raising the kundalini" causes the activation of certain chemicals in the brain through conscious and directed action.

BALANCE

In Kundalini Yoga, balance is extremely important. That is why we teach a total lifestyle, rather than just focusing on exercises to raise the kundalini energy. Everything we do in our lives affects our kundalini energy, and our kundalini energy affects everything we do in our lives.

The vibrations of every word we speak, every thought we think, instantly raises or lowers our kundalini. It is as if we are registering our thoughts, moods, words, and actions on the most delicate and sensitive thermometer ever invented. It responds instantly to the slightest change in our vibration. Keeping the kundalini thermometer up requires monitoring every thought and word, otherwise, our vibration or frequency drops, or falls into the lower chakras. All the chakras are valuable, and we need to use all of them, but when the kundalini energy is primarily focused in our lower chakras, and we do not exercise any control over them, then we become slaves to our minds and emotions.

Without the consistency of maintaining a higher perspective by using the neutral mind, (See Three Minds are Better Than One in Conquer the Mind) there is seldom contentment. No matter what we achieve, what success in the world we have, it ends up being hollow unless we fulfill the soul's yearning to bring higher consciousness into our daily lives.

The essential nature of the soul is pure joy.

If I'm not experiencing joy,

then I'm not experiencing my soul.

8

Chakras

(Energy Centers)

"Where are you at?"

Until Yogi Bhajan taught what the chakras actually are, and how they influence our lives, I had no desire to explore the labyrinth of Sanskrit terms and esoteric symbology in the yoga books I had seen. The brilliantly colored lotus flowers, petals decorated with deities, animals or other symbols portraying the chakras were very pretty, but I didn't understand what connection they had to my life. Fortunately, what he has taught us about the chakras does not require any investigation into the occult. It's not mysterious at all. On the contrary, the nature of the chakras and their functions is simple and to the point. The point being: wherever the majority of your kundalini energy is focused or polarized affects the way you are. The chakras do play a vital role in the way we human beings function, so let me go into a little detail and share with you the understanding the master of Kundalini Yoga has given us.

Chakras are centers of consciousness. They are focal points of energy which have a direct, immediate and profound effect on our daily lives.

THE ETERNAL FLOW OF POWER

Human beings have been designed by the Master Architect with patterns of energy flows. Energy flows through our spine, through our arms and legs and through eight specific energy centers, or chakras. Six of the projected centers of consciousness that correspond to these chakras are located in the body, while the seventh is just above the top of the skull, and the eighth chakra is the aura or magnetic field.

The energies of the first five chakras correspond to the five basic elements of which we are made: earth, water, fire, air, and ether.

WHERE ARE YOU AT?

The particular energy center or chakra where the majority of your kundalini energy is primarily focused—or polarized—influences your basic behavior and attitudes. Let me make that even stronger, the chakra that you use as home-base for your kundalini energy pretty much determines the kind of person you are. The location of the major portion of your kundalini energy also accounts for the kinds of situations you attract to you.

Just as in real estate, the three most important components are: location, location, location. Events become more understandable when we know where our energy is primarily located. Why? Because energy acts like a magnet. We constantly attract vibrations to ourselves that are on the same wavelength as the chakra from which we are operating. These vibrations are experienced as events and situations. People are drawn to us (not necessarily consciously) by the vibrations we project—knowingly or unknowingly.

Yes, it's also true that "opposites attract." Raising our kundalini to activate the neutral mind (sixth chakra) enables us to balance the forces of positive and negative that exist in every situation. Balance is one of the main keys to self-mastery and contentment. The yogi strives to achieve balance so that he is never thrown off base. In yogic terms it is said, "A yogi is not affected by the pairs of opposites." We practice Kundalini Yoga in order to balance and coordinate the functions of the lower chakras and to experience the realms of the higher chakras.

After the kundalini energy rises and becomes accustomed to flowing freely through all the chakras, there is a definite change of consciousness, a noticeable transformation in the character of an individual. The person looks at life differently, feels different and therefore acts differently. The real “proof” that someone’s kundalini has risen lies in the upgrading of that person’s attitude toward life, his relationships with other people, and with himself.

Raising the kundalini has to do with spiritual elevation. It is not to be confused with hearing sounds or seeing visions. When the kundalini is allowed to rise through the practice of Kundalini Yoga, it will not make a person weird or unbalanced. Note that the operative word here is “allowed.” Kundalini Yoga does not force the kundalini to rise; it prepares the body to allow it to rise so that you can experience your higher consciousness. The object achieved is to coordinate and balance the functions of the chakras that are concerned with the needs of daily life with the universal consciousness and expansion that are found in the higher chakras. When this balance occurs, you become empowered, you are able to be a compassionate, conscious, and capable human being.

Cherdhi Kalaa.* “high spirits” result when Kundalini returns down through Ida and Pingala and opens all the chakras!

Some people think that merging with universal consciousness is a loss of identity. On the contrary, it is a loss of limitation. It is the discovery and experience of one’s greater identity, which is infinite. Succinctly put, “Sat Nam: Truth is your identity.”

THE EIGHT CHAKRAS

As my mother used to say, “There’s a time and a place for everything.” Each chakra has an important and necessary function to perform for us. We need all of them. No one chakra is better or worse than another, no chakra is more important than another. By understanding their purpose, we can make the best use of their power. The energy of the first five chakras corresponds to the five elements, Earth, Water, Fire, Air, and Ether. Think about the characteristics of these elements and you will have some clues as to the properties of the chakras associated with them.

FIRST CHAKRA: Earth

The first chakra represents the earth element in us. It is located in the rectum at the conjunction of 72,000 nerve endings. We couldn't get along without the first chakra. It enables us to eliminate solid waste, a most essential function of the physical body. The first chakra concerns have to do with the basic questions of security and survival. When functioning properly, this energy center gives a person strength and confidence. If it is not functioning properly, a person lives in fear and insecurity and can have a perverted approach to life.

SECOND CHAKRA: Water

The second projected center of consciousness has to do with the water element in our nature. It is located in the sex organs. When the second chakra is functioning properly, a person is creative and imaginative, energized and lively. Blockages in the second chakra can create an obsession with sex, to the point that nothing else matters in the person's life. There may also be an unhealthy indulgence in many kinds of fantasy, not only sexual fantasy.

THIRD CHAKRA: Fire

The third chakra represents the fire element in us. It is located in the navel point, a major focal point of energy where all 72,000 nerve endings meet. It controls the fire of digestion. The energy here is concerned with identity, domain, and judgment. If there is an imbalance, it can manifest in the person's character as excessive greed and an overwhelming drive for personal power. No matter how much a person gets, he always wants more. Nothing is ever enough, no matter whether it is needed or not.

As we do with the energy of all the chakras, we want to harness the energy of the third chakra so we can use it for our own benefit. On the positive side, third chakra energy gives us initiative and courage. Its fire can ignite a burning desire in us to accomplish great deeds and give us the zeal to keep up!

LOWER TRIANGLE MEETS HIGHER TRIANGLE

Although God can be realized through any one of the chakras, the first three chakras are designed mainly to deal with the physical needs and concerns of worldly life. It is the fourth chakra that is the balance point between these lower chakras and the higher chakras that are more concerned with universal consciousness.

FOURTH CHAKRA, or HEART CENTER: Air

The fourth projected center of consciousness is sometimes called the "Heart Center" or the "Center of Christ Consciousness." It is located at the center of the chest, not in the physical organ of the heart. The fourth chakra relates to the element of air in us. The power to sacrifice, born of universal divine love, comes from this chakra. It is the home of true maternal love.

Any selfless act of giving without expectation of return comes from the heart center. It is the arena of kindness (the highest virtue) and compassion. When we truly speak "heart to heart" with someone, our language is sweet, kind, and uplifting, and the message gets across. When an awakened human being dwells in the fourth chakra, he is accessible, connected, loving, and compassionate.

Some people think of the heart center as the opening of feelings and emotions. Not true. Actually, it is the second chakra that opens sensory intensities, whereas the fourth chakra gives you a relationship to your feelings that changes commotion to devotion. It transforms passion to compassion. Coming from the heart center makes you act consciously about the whole range of feelings, it doesn't just intensify them.

LOVE

We suffer a great deal in our lives because our kundalini energy is stuck in our lower three chakras (the lower triangle), most of the time. It is only when the heart chakra is stimulated and becomes active, that true love can be experienced.

What usually passes for “love” in our society is, at best, a business deal. It would be more accurately described as possessiveness or lust. “I’ll love you if....” True love has no boundaries, no demands, and no limits. It is a total giving. Total acceptance. Love is blind, it doesn’t question, and it doesn’t find fault. Very few of us have ever experienced such true love, therefore we don’t understand it. The saints and masters who have offered it to humanity have usually been crucified.

“To live is to love, to love is to give, to give is to have love.”¹

FIFTH CHAKRA, the THROAT CHAKRA: Ether

The fifth energy center has to do with the power and impact of speech. When we speak from the fifth chakra our words are direct and penetrating. They also may be painfully blunt. One of the primary characteristics of this fifth chakra is the power of projection. Anytime you succeed in penetrating with your words, the fifth chakra must operate. The fifth chakra commands by the word.

Being primarily focused at the throat chakra means we think about, talk about, are interested in nothing but Truth (i.e., God). However, when not functioning properly, the energy here can make us highly opinionated and what we communicate is our own personal limited version of “truth.” The fifth chakra gives access to the arena of knowledge.

THE SIXTH CHAKRA: Intuition

The sixth chakra, or Ajna Chakra, located at the center of the forehead, slightly above the eyebrows, is sometimes called the “Third Eye.”

Here is where we can “see the unseen, know the unknown.” It is from the sixth chakra that we gain access to, and increase our faculty of, intuition. The sixth chakra is the direct pipeline to the infinite source of universal knowledge and wisdom in each of us. When we function from the sixth chakra we can use our neutral or meditative mind; and tap into the knowledge of the past, the present, and the future.

As you focus more and more on the sixth chakra, your intuition becomes more active, and you will increasingly recognize and cherish breath, life, and intuition as gifts you have received.

The sixth chakra is the place to set your goals and assess the long-range effects of your actions. It is the arena of projection and sophistication.

The more we stimulate the pituitary gland via the sixth chakra, the more it will secrete, and the more powerfully intuition will serve us. We will just know!

Intuition is a higher faculty than intellect. It is in a different realm than the intellect. Nor is being intuitive the same as being psychic. Psychic power uses energy from, and functions through, the third chakra, not the sixth. Psychic abilities can be very useful, but psychic powers have many pitfalls. Being psychic is very individual and subjective, and there is a broad margin for error. Also, there can be a great temptation to use psychic power to control other people.

THE SEVENTH CHAKRA

Sometimes called the “Thousand Petalled Lotus,” the seventh center of consciousness is at the top of the skull. It is also referred to as the “Gate of Salvation,” “Tenth Gate,” or “Crown Chakra.”

When a person raises and experiences the kundalini energy at the seventh chakra, he or she merges into a state of bliss (anand) that has been described as “indescribable.” Hence the mantra of ecstasy, “Wahe Guru,” which means “Wow! The experience of God is so fantastic, wonderful, and great I can’t describe it!”

This state of divine union is known as “yoga” (sometimes referred to as samadhi). When a yogi leaves his body consciously to merge with the Infinite, it is through the seventh chakra. These are the enlightened beings. They teach us that “All things come from God and all things go to God.”

EIGHTH CHAKRA: Aura

The Eighth Chakra is the magnetic field generated by the vibrations of a human being. Your aura surrounds you. It normally extends several feet in every direction. The quality and size of the aura reveals a lot about the person. It is either a projection of power or it can reveal the weakness and depression of defeat. This eighth chakra is your protective shield. It changes in color, strength, and size depending upon your general physical health, and your moment-to-moment thoughts and feelings. Many people are able to see the aura, many are not — but it's there. Kirlian photography claims to capture the image of the aura on film. It is one of the many technical devices people have used to explore ways to register the changes in the aura and subtle body.² We may not see a person's aura, but we can feel it. We are often attracted or repelled by someone from our contact with their electromagnetic field.

BALANCE

Once the kundalini has risen up the central column of the spine and then returns down the ida and the pingala nerve channels to be distributed and balanced in all the chakras, a person's life takes on a new quality. Not too strong, and not too weak, but J U S T right (in perfect balance), is the way we want all of our chakras to function.

CHAKRAS. KUNDALINI. AND MY HAPPINESS

Where my kundalini energy is primarily focused affects how I am vibrating. Happiness does not live in low vibrations. It can't exist there. They are mutually exclusive. It's all a matter of vibration. It's not a matter of moral judgment. It's almost a mathematical equation: thoughts and words of kindness, compassion, generosity, love, sacrifice, etc, have a high frequency or vibration; whereas thoughts, words, and feelings of anger, jealousy, resentment, greed, egotism, fear, selfishness, etc. have a very low vibration. And so, of course, when we are involved in them, they pull us down to our lower chakras. It's almost like a piano keyboard. Whatever note you strike, that is what vibrates. When you hit middle "C," that is where you're at. (Secondarily, that tone vibrates all those notes that are in harmony with it, even on other octaves.) Your consciousness is exactly, precisely at that place, at any given moment, where your thoughts and words are vibrating.

NERVE OF THE SOUL

Yogi Bhajan speaks of the kundalini:

"Yes, kundalini is known as the nerve of the soul. This is to be awakened. Your soul is to be awakened. When soul gets awakened, there remains nothing. What else is there?

In the practical reality, these chakras are imaginary and nothing else. This kundalini is just a kundalini and nothing else. It is not very important. These pranas and apanas are just there. Everything is set in us. We lack nothing. We use these terms simply to make the process clear so we can get on with it. It is very simple. After getting myself into the darkness for years together, I found that if I would have known on the first day that it was so easy, I could have saved myself a lot of hassle. When I found out that the kundalini really can come up like this, I was astonished. It was a surprise to me. I said, 'That's all there is to the kundalini?' And my master said, 'Yes!'

Now, I have to confess that the above quotation is incomplete. In the article quoted, he talks about prana and apana and the chakras, which he called "imaginary" (although they do exist). He's the master, and he has a way of putting things that is quite unique. He also says:

"All it is, creating the prana in the cavity and mixing it with apana and taking it down (as we give pressure to the oil) and bringing the oil up. This is kundalini. That's it. That is the greatest truth. Truth is bitter I know, so I cannot speak all the truth; but I speak indirectly and directly about the truth because I cannot speak something beyond truth..."³

TO SUMMARIZE:

You can improve your mood, lift your spirits, and brighten your day simply by raising your kundalini energy. We suffer when we let the first three chakras control us, instead of controlling and using their valuable energies for positive, constructive purposes. Each element has a positive and necessary function in our lives. Watch yourself. Are you starting to get angry? (You know that's bad for the digestive system!) Take a few long deep conscious breaths, bring your concentration up to your sixth chakra, and with your neutral mind, decide, do you really want to lose your temper? That fire energy can be translated into enthusiasm, initiative, and courage. You can even choose to take third chakra energy and use it to run around the block. Do your cardio-vascular system some good. The point is to be able to choose and use, instead of living in self-abuse where you lose control.

As you read the following chapters, and try the various sets of exercises, you'll be automatically using the energy of each chakra to work for you, not against you.

Sat Kriya

OKAY, you may be thinking, that all sounds very nice, but just exactly how do we raise the kundalini? It's simple: Go to the Things To Do section and learn to apply the Root Lock or Mul Bandh. Then practice Sat Kriya. Any exercise in which you apply the root lock helps to raise the kundalini. The root lock closes off the three lower chakras (the lower triangle) and therefore the kundalini energy must flow upward. It is like closing flood gates. There's nowhere to go but up!

9 Stress, Stamina & Nerves of Steel

When I was a little girl back in Minnesota in the early thirties, appliances were built to last. I don't remember my mother ever buying a new toaster or a new iron. But periodically she would show us a frayed electric cord with the fabric wrapped around the cord worn so thin that the copper wires inside were exposed. She'd say it was time to get a new cord, because a frayed cord was dangerous. She explained that without insulation, bare wires could cause a short, blow a fuse or even start a fire!

I can still picture those frayed cords, with their frazzled ends and the bare wires exposed. When I think about the nerves in our bodies, I see a network of 72,000 "wires" intertwining and connecting, carrying messages back and forth to the brain and throughout the nervous system. No matter how good our intentions, if our nerves are weak, frayed and frazzled, we can, and often do, blow a fuse. However, when our nerves are strong and well insulated, they give us physical and emotional endurance. Strong nerves make it possible for us to have patience. Otherwise, when our nerves are weak, we can fly off the handle at the slightest provocation and easily lose our tempers.

When anyone loses his temper, it means he has lost self control. Unfortunately, yelling and screaming in anger creates a false sense of personal power. That rush of adrenaline feels great—for the moment. But it doesn't last. When a person gets angry, the adrenals kick in to fuel the body's automatic defense system. The survival instinct of "fight or flight" triggers secretion of the adrenal glands.

Secreting large amounts of adrenaline not only overloads the adrenals, but taxes the pancreas as well. Those of us with weak adrenals and those who have hypoglycemia might just as well take poison as get angry! It has the same effect.

Self-control and common sense go out the window in a fit of anger. The rational mind stops functioning. People often say and do things they deeply regret later. Feelings can be hurt, and long-term relationships can be damaged or destroyed by careless words spoken in the heat of the moment.

Relationships crumble when you give anger a tumble.

Apologizing can never erase the imprint of the pain that was inflicted. People may forgive, but they usually don't forget. In fact, there is a permanent log of every word ever uttered. It is called the Akashic Record. It's not on paper, but it's there, just the same. Vibrations set in motion when we speak don't just disappear.

So, if you agree anger is damaging, does that mean that you should stifle your emotions? Grit your teeth, bite your tongue, and "stuff it" when you're provoked or aggravated? No. Not at all. Please read on. There's a better way to deal with frustrating situations.

THE FIRST STEP IS TO BUILD STRONG NERVES

Most of us want to be kind, relaxed, and loving people. We want to be wise and patient parents, understanding spouses, and good friends. But how can we be any of those things when every nerve is so raw it's shrieking in pain, and we're "on the edge," about to "lose it," most of the time?

STRESS

If our nerves are not strong enough to withstand the onslaught of life's daily challenges, then we are going to suffer from the number one killer disease of modern times: STRESS!

Every day brings some stressful situation, some test, big or small, which we have to face, to solve, to overcome. That's life, folks! Life is a school, and earth is a giant classroom and the tests are going to continue until we graduate. The outer events that occur, the daily challenges at home, in the office, the supermarket, on the freeway, are all tests. They are exercises in learning to master our minds and emotions so that we are not uptight and upset.

Learning how to be patient, calm, compassionate, and kind, no matter what happens around us, or to us, is not only a practical accomplishment. It's a yogic skill!

In California, we have earthquakes. As yet no one has figured out how to prevent them. No one can control them. It has been found that the main cause of injury is not the earthquake itself, but what happens when people panic. Instead of waiting calmly for the danger to subside, when panic takes over, people run madly about and get hit by falling debris, or electrocuted by live wires. We may not be able to change the circumstances happening around us, but we can learn to control the way we respond. And I don't mean by squelching or stifling our reactions or denying our emotions. Developing a strong meditative mind through Kundalini Yoga is a major step toward developing our own indomitable inner strength and serenity with the ability to call upon it whenever we need it.

ROBOTIC REACTION

Through meditation, mantra, and pranayam, we can tap into the absolutely calm and tranquil inner peace and stability that already exists inside us. With strong nerves and a balanced glandular system, we won't just "react" to situations. We will be in such a stable and secure mental and emotional condition that whatever and whenever challenging events occur, we will be competent to evaluate our response and decide how we want to handle them.

As aware yogis, we can stop being reactive robots, and become calm and capable human beings, masters of our emotions and minds. Strong nerves play a big part in helping us to achieve all of the above.

"Don't react—resurrect."

—Yogi Bhajan

THREE THINGS YOU CAN DO

- Breath of Fire is a powerful and rapid method of building strong nerves. Practice it every day.
- Breathe only through your left nostril for twenty-six long slow, deep breaths to calm yourself down in any tense situation.
- If you feel the heat of anger rising inside you, drink a full 8-ounces of water immediately.

There may be times when you want to act forcefully, dynamically. There are times when you have to be assertive. That is different from being reactive. People who practice martial arts know they diminish their effectiveness if they get angry. They utilize the breath to center themselves. They inhale deeply before applying a karate chop or breaking cinder blocks with their bare hands. Remember, breath has atomic power. Use it wisely.

There may be times when it's useful to let people think you're angry. There may be times when it's required to yell and scream. But as for me personally, I have had to give up that "luxury" because just going through the motions of being angry, much less really feeling it, makes me physically ill. My system can't handle the adrenaline so I can't afford to be at the mercy of my emotions. I need to be able to choose intelligently when and where and how to respond to all situations. Besides, I don't want to be just a reactive machine, with buttons that anybody can push. I definitely don't want anybody to have that kind of control over me! How about you?

You do not have to let your emotions rule you. You can start by recognizing that your emotions are not you. Your emotions are not your identity! You can experience them and observe them happening at the same time, just as you will learn to observe your mind in action.

NERVES, MUSCLES, AND YOGA

Our nerves support our muscles and give us endurance. Endurance allows us to exercise longer and develop stronger muscles. When Yogi Bhajan was a young man in college in India, he was an all around athlete and track star. He played hockey and was captain of the soccer team. He says he used to train for athletic events primarily by doing yogic breathing exercises (pranayam). He knew yoga would give him the stamina and endurance to win the trophies. And win he did!

In the "Things To Do" section of this book, you'll find some exercises that are specifically for balancing your glandular system and strengthening your nerves. Will they really work? You'll have to practice them to find out. As we keep saying, "Doing is believing." For a fair trial, give yourself forty days of regular practice. It takes that long to develop a habit. It takes ninety days to confirm it, and after 120 days, others will verify it!

ANGER

Anger is a condition of frustration
born out of the ego feeling powerless.

"The bold and handsome young Samurai warrior stood respectfully before the aged Zen master and asked, 'Master, teach me about Heaven and Hell.'¹ The master snapped his head up in disgust and said, 'Teach YOU about Heaven and Hell? Why, I doubt that you could even learn to keep your sword from rusting! You ignorant fool! How dare you suppose that you could understand anything I might care to say!' The old man went on and on, becoming even more insulting, while the young swordsman's surprise turned first to confusion and then to hot anger, rising by the minute.

"Master or no Master, who can insult a Samurai and live? At last, with teeth clenched and blood nearly boiling in fury, the warrior blindly drew his sword and prepared to end the old man's sharp tongue and life all in a moment. The master looked straight into his eyes and said, 'That's Hell.' At the peak of his rage, the Samurai realized that this was indeed his teaching; the Master had hounded him into a living Hell, driven by uncontrolled anger and ego.

"The young man, profoundly humbled, sheathed his sword and bowed low to his great spiritual teacher. Looking up into the aged wise man's beaming face, he felt more love and compassion than he had ever felt in his life, at which point the master raised his index finger as would a schoolteacher, and said, 'And that's Heaven.' "

10 Healing

Doctors diagnose. herbs & medicines
cure, healing is a gift of God.

From time immemorial, there have been “healers,” people who seem to have a special gift to ease pain, bring comfort, and cure others. Yet no person is really a healer — however, everyBODY can be a healer, including you and me.

Each of us can increase our ability to bring more healing energy to ourselves and to others. We can do this by tapping into the source of all healing power, the One Creator who breathes in each of us, regenerating us with each inhalation.

What does “healing” mean? Healing means bringing life to a situation or condition that is deteriorating. Healing means repairing, rejuvenating, regenerating.

Through the practice of Kundalini Yoga kriyas, breathing techniques, and mantras, we increase the life force, the prana, flowing through our bodies. It flows through our hands, our eyes, even our voice. We can use these as tools to heal ourselves and others.

Through the use of words vibrating in the form of mantra: positive affirmations and positive thinking, we can heal. Every word has its own wavelength, or frequency of vibration. Every word is a sound current (even if inaudible) which sets energy into motion. This energy goes out in ripples or waves and (to switch analogies in mid-ocean) the vibrations eventually return to us like a boomerang, bringing more of the same. There is power in positive thinking and positive affirmations! That power can work to expedite the healing process for ourselves and others.

SELF- HEALING

Do you believe it? Can you accept the fact that no matter what the outer circumstances in your life may appear to be, you have a right to be, Healthy, Happy and Holy?

Even if you're feeling lousy, especially if you are feeling lousy, and you're running a fever of 103 degrees; or you just broke your arm and lost your job, the truth is that there is a level of your being that is perfectly healthy, happy, and holy at all times.

When you affirm (state and repeat) that you are "Healthy, Happy and Holy," you literally change your subconscious perception of what is happening. That perception accelerates the healing process.

We create whatever situation we affirm. Everything is "in the eye (or ear?) of the beholder." By mentally creating health, we set up favorable circumstances for that condition to manifest physically.

In the meantime, follow medical procedures. Don't throw away the prescription medicine yet, but understand (stand-under) and know that God is healing you rapidly, and keep telling yourself that you are now already vibrantly healthy! Positive affirmation is done in the present tense, because it is happening now in the sub-conscious.

How we view events and circumstances defines the impact they have on

SIMPLE SELF-HEALING MEDITATION

Sit (or lie down) with spine straight.
Breathing only through the nose, inhale deeply then recite aloud:

HEALTHY AM I
HAPPY AM I
HOLY AM I

Inhale deeply again, feeling divine, loving, healing energy pouring into your body with each inhalation, and repeat the affirmation again. Continue for several minutes, taking in a deep breath between each cycle. Continue for as long as you choose. Do not be shy, chant loudly and forcefully so that the message sinks into your subconscious! Don't underestimate the power of this simple affirmation.

us! Using our convenient TV analogy, we can “switch channels” on our inner view screen from misery to comedy, from tears to laughter at any given moment. We each have that power. Try it, you may like it!

A mental condition can change instantly. the physical takes longer.

HEALING OTHERS

Everybody is a healer and nobody is a healer. There is only one true healer, sometimes called God, or God Consciousness. It is only through that One Divine Power that healing really takes place. Some people develop themselves to be especially clear conduits for it. Your very presence can heal others when your vibration reflects and projects the divine radiance of your soul.

Did you ever shake hands with someone whose touch felt so slimy, you couldn't wait to go and wash your hands? It's as if you'd been holding a dying fish. On the other hand (pardon the pun), did you ever shake hands with someone and feel the warmth of love, strength, and kindness flowing into you?

What you feel in both cases is the other person's electro-magnetic field. His or her vibration is being transmitted to you. It is the vibrations people emanate that we feel, especially through touch. When a person is ill, their vibration lacks prana. We can, therefore, influence someone else's condition by transmitting prana through our touch, our words, and our thoughts.

One of the interesting things about healing is that when we pray to heal someone else, we often heal ourselves. The way it works is that “What goes around, comes around.” “As you sow, so shall you reap.” The injunction to “Do unto others as you would have them do unto you,” is a very practical guideline for life. The more we give, the more we shall receive.

ACROSS TIME AND SPACE

RAA MAA DAA SAA SAA SAY SO HUNG

Here is the most powerful healing vibration/mantra that I know. (See facing page.) It tremendously enhances your effectiveness as a "healer." Regular practice brings increased prana into your hands. For healing at a distance, this is the mantra. It cuts across time and space so you can send healing energy to someone thousands of miles away as easily as you can send it across the room. I have included the musical notation for the way I first learned it, with the instructions Yogi Bhajan gave for chanting it. (Later, he taught other variations of this melody.)

HEALING HANDS

Would you like to increase the kindness and effectiveness of your healing touch? Here's a simple routine you can practice that brings more prana into your hands.

1. Rub the palms of your hands together briskly for 3-5 minutes. Produce heat in the hands. Then stretch your arms out to the sides, parallel to the floor, palms up, thumbs pointing back. Breath of Fire for 3 minutes.
2. Then inhale, hold the breath in, and with the arms still out to the sides, bend your wrists, so your palms are facing out (away from the body) as if you were pushing out the walls on either side of you. FEEL THE ENERGY IN THE CENTER OF THE PALMS FLOWING TO YOUR ENTIRE BODY.
3. Rub hands together again for 2 minutes. Then, bend your left elbow, keeping the forearm parallel to the floor, with the left hand in front of the diaphragm, palm facing up, place your right palm facing down about 8 inches above the left palm. MEDITATE ON THE EXCHANGE OF ENERGY BETWEEN THE PALMS OF THE HANDS.

Practice this for 11 minutes every day if you want to be able to transfer healing energy to someone or some thing such as massage oil or a glass of water.

RAA MAA DAA SAA SAA SAY SO HUNG

TO SEND GOD'S HEALING POWER & ENERGY

To be chanted powerfully from the navel point for 11 minutes. Sit in easy pose with the elbows tucked comfortably against your ribs. Extend forearms out at a 45 degree angle out from the center of the body. Palms are flat, facing up, fingers together, thumbs spread. Consciously keep the palms flat during the meditation. Be aware they may tend to curl up. Eyes are 9/10 closed.

RAA	Sun
MAA	Moon
DAA	Earth (Receiver of Totality)
SAA	Totality
SAA	Totality
SAY	Spirit, Energy
SO	Manifestation
HUNG	Experience of Thou

Pull in the navel point powerfully on SO and HUNG and "clip off" each of these two syllables, making them short. Particularly note that HUNG is not long and drawn out. You clip it off forcefully as you pull in the navel. Chant one complete cycle of the entire mantra, and then inhale deeply and repeat.

(Remember, chanting is not singing, it is vibrating.)

After 11 minutes, close your eyes, inhale deeply and hold the breath as you offer a healing prayer, visualizing the person you wish to heal as being totally healthy, radiant, and strong. Then exhale and inhale deeply again, hold the breath and offer your prayer..

You can do this several times, each time creating in your mind a picture of the person completely healed. You may want to imagine the person completely engulfed in healing white light.

To complete the meditation, inhale deeply, lift your arms up high and vigorously shake out your hands and fingers. Relax.

WORDS THAT HEALED—NOT!

The Power of Negative Thinking

Just to heal the physical body is not enough. (See chapter on Ten Bodies.) If we don't also heal the mental and emotional causes of a problem, it will most likely return in the same or some other form. That is why we emphasize the necessity for positive thinking and doing sadhana. (For information on sadhana, personal spiritual practice, see Chapter on Sadhana.)

Following is a true story. I know, because it happened to me.

It was one of those "cold" (for Los Angeles) rainy, winter days, and I was sitting on the floor of my old apartment on Preuss Road, doing bookkeeping for our newly formed 3HO Foundation. In the early 1970's I had no office so I worked at home. The financial department of 3HO consisted of some shoe boxes with receipts I kept in my closet. I held a full-time job at the Beverly Hilton, wrote letters for Yogi Bhan, and handled the finances for his 3HO yoga classes in my spare time.

That historic day, I decided I could use a cup of hot tea to warm up. So I heated up the ever present pot of Yogi Tea on the stove and carried a steaming cup into the living room.

My feet felt cold, so I set the cup down carefully on the floor beside my books and papers, and went into the bedroom to put on a pair of socks. Talk about putting your foot into it! I came back into the living room, and forgetting the cup was there, I stepped right smack into the boiling hot tea. I let out a yell and ran to the bathroom. More accurately, I hopped on the other foot while clutching wildly at the sock, trying to tear it off as fast as I could, since of course the wet wool retained the heat of the liquid, and was burning furiously. I grabbed some ointment from the medicine cabinet and spread it on the injured foot, which already was turning a bright and angry red.

Yogi Bhan had just come back to town from one of his teaching tours and I knew he was at Guru Ram Das Ashram, half a block away. I picked up the phone and called him, assuming he would come running over immediately to comfort and heal me. Forget it!

When I told him what had happened, he said, "You'll be all right. I'm sending Pink Krishna (nicknamed for her rosy complexion, the happy result of months of eating only green vegetables) over to take care of you." And so he did. She arrived in just a few minutes, and helped set up a place for me to lie down on the couch. I knew I couldn't possibly sleep in my bed, and I didn't expect to sleep much anyway.

I phoned the Beverly Hilton, told the manager I had severely burned my foot, so I would not be able to come to work the next day. I lay down, closed my eyes and settled in for a restless night. I slept fitfully off and on, but lo and behold, when morning dawned, there was not the slightest trace of a burn. There was no discoloration of the skin and no pain. I was amazed and thrilled.

I called my mother and said, "Guess what happened..." I told her the whole story of the hot tea, the burning sock, the amazing healing, and finished by saying "I don't believe it!" I called at least four other people and repeated the story, each time ending with the words, "I don't believe it!" By four o'clock in the afternoon my foot didn't believe it either. It started to ache and burn again. The redness returned in full force and I spent several weeks waiting for the slow process of nature to heal my foot. I learned that day about the power of my words!

We do create with every word we speak, and the power of positive (or negative) thinking and speaking is not a fantasy, it's a reality.

I had a different opportunity to experience the power of my words many years later when I slipped and fell down a flight of cement steps early one morning and broke two ribs. One of the advantages of breaking ribs is that they heal themselves back together perfectly (and people are very kind to you while you're recuperating). However, in the meantime, you can't laugh or cough or even take a deep breath without severe pain. The pain, in spite of medication, could be quite intense, so I decided to try some of the yogic technology I had been preaching. And, I discovered, "By George, it works!" Whenever I felt a major twinge of pain, I'd say out loud (or just think), "Thank you God, I accept your wonderful gift of pain," and it would ease up immediately.

"You've got to Ac-Cent-U-Ate the Positive
E-lim-in-ate the Negative and Latch on to the Affirmative.
Don't mess with Mr. Inbetween..."

—Hit Song by Johnny Mercer, circa 1940

Gratefully accepting everything that comes to us as a gift of God invokes a remarkably dynamic response from God. An “attitude of gratitude” invites and allows the power of God to work faster and easier to bless and heal us.

Try it for yourself. Whenever anything happens — good, bad, pleasant, unpleasant, desirable, undesirable — see it as something that God is doing. Then verbally express and affirm your gratitude. See what happens. At least have the faith to try it as an experiment. Even if someone does something lousy, thank God that it’s not you doing it! The person doing the lousy thing has that lousy karma to deal with. How you respond becomes your karma.

GURU RAM DAS TO THE RESCUE

At one point in his life, when Yogi Bhajan was threatened and harassed by people trying to do him harm, he meditated and prayed, calling on Guru Ram Das for help, and Guru Ram Das gave him this special mantra to use whenever he — or anyone — is in danger. (You can use it, too.)

GURU GURU WAHE GURU, GURU RAM DAS GURU

When we chant to Guru Ram Das, we are not chanting to a person, but rather to the consciousness that he embodied, and we are invoking the special qualities that he represented. “Ram” in itself is one of the Hindu names of God, and “Das” means servant. Ram Das was indeed, a beloved servant of God. He was a Raj Yogi and the fourth in the line of Sikh Gurus. Each of the ten Gurus personified and exemplified special virtues, and manifested certain qualities, to demonstrate that a person in any walk of life can be divine. Loved and respected for his humility, service, and compassion, Guru Ram Das was also a great Yogi, especially renowned for his extraordinary gift of healing.

HAIL GURU RAM DAS and HEAL THE WORLD !

What you are about to read is a true story. No names have been changed. This really happened.

In 1938, when Yogi Bhajan was nine years old, he contracted a serious ear infection. Neither his father, who was a physician, nor any of the doctors and healers consulted, could find a way to cure it and the infection was spreading. He was diagnosed as incurable. He was expected to die.

During his sleep one night, the young boy had a visit from Guru Ram Das who told him that he should ask his father (Dr. Kartar Singh Puri) to put some onion juice in the infected ear. He told his father of the strange request. Sure enough, the treatment worked!

From that time onward, Harbhajan Singh Puri, later to become Yogi Bhajan, looked upon Guru Ram Das as his special protector, teacher, and guide. 3HO Ashrams around the world are named in honor of the great soul of Guru Ram Das.

Guru Ram Das was a "Raj Yogi." The famous Golden Temple in Amritsar, India, was built in his honor. It is called Hari Mandir Sahib and is considered the holiest of holy places by Sikhs all over the world. Open to people of all religions, all colors, all nationalities, it is a sacred shrine where tens of thousands of people come to be inspired and uplifted by the vibrations of the Guru, and to sip and dip in the healing waters surrounding the Temple. Hari Mandir Sahib is built half of marble and half of gold.

As a young man, Yogi Bhajan washed the marble floors of the Golden Temple every night for four years, to cleanse and purify himself — praying to Guru Ram Das. He went in as a yogi and came out a saint. Such is the power and majesty of Guru Ram Das.

BRIEF LESSON IN HISTORY OF THE SIKH GURUS

Of the ten Sikh Gurus, one was a very young child, several were very old men, some were married, some were single. Some were poets, some were soldiers. Guru Ram Das, who lived from 1534 to 1581, was the fourth Guru to carry the divine light and infinite consciousness of Guru Nanak, the first Guru. Guru Nanak taught that everyone is inherently divine, and that people should not fight about how to worship the One God who breathes in everybody. His followers, or students were called "shishyas," or "Sikhs." Sikhs no longer worship any person as Guru, but look to the Siri Guru Granth Sahib, the embodiment of the Word of God (Shabd Guru), as their living Guru.

11

Let's Talk About Food

Here are some clichés that are true (clichés often are):

- You are what you eat.
- Your body is the living temple of God.
- Eat to live, don't live to eat.

For thousands of people, controlling their diet is one of life's biggest challenges. It's a daily battle of will power versus compulsion and habit. Health clubs, gyms, and spas are overflowing with bodies stretching and straining, huffing and puffing, grunting and sweating to "get rid of ugly, unwanted body fat" and achieve ideal body weight. Fat or thin, we can be badly undernourished, if we're not getting the foods our bodies need.

Dining on expensive gourmet food smothered in rich gravies and exotic sauces seems to be considered a sign of "success" in our society. Of course ulcers, gastritis, constipation, and overweight, not to mention high blood pressure and heart disease, can result from overeating or eating the wrong foods (and you don't have to be rich to gorge on foods way too high in fat content or salt). Overweight is not only damaging physically but psychologically.

Dozens of different books promoting dozens of different diets are spilling over the bookstore shelves. Television ads abound with weight-loss programs. Each one claims to have the perfect solution. However, being able to apply any solution requires a change in our habits, including our habitual way of thinking about ourselves. Fortunately, the yogis have given us methods to help us change our habit patterns. (*Please read the chapter called Creatures of Habit, and refer to the "Meditation to Change Habit Patterns."*) Meanwhile, let's talk about food.

LIVING TO EAT or EATING TO LIVE?

There are two kinds of eating. The first kind is what is called recreational eating. This is eating purely (actually not purely) for taste or to be sociable. Recreational eating often consists of junk food. What do I mean by junk food? Any substance that leaves an excess of toxic waste in the body that you can't eliminate within twenty-four hours. Any food that depletes the body of vitamins, overstimulates the nerves, or overtaxes the pancreas is junk food in my book!

The second kind of eating is the kind of eating that nourishes, sustains, and energizes the body. It's known as "eating to live." We spend a large portion of our lives eating. What and how we eat affects us physically, mentally, and emotionally. Let's talk about eating from the standpoint of the yogis, whose purpose is to get the best out of every aspect of life.

Let me share with you some yogic information, keeping in mind that each of us is different and has individual dietary requirements. One man's meat really is another man's poison. Each of us needs to find the right balance, the chemical combination of foods that best serves our metabolism and bodily needs. Meals should look appetizing and taste good, too. Healthy food doesn't have to be dull and boring or taste like straw. Eating a healthy diet does not have to be distasteful.

TO EAT OR NOT TO EAT?

In ancient books of knowledge, the Vedas, we can find instructions on how to eat, such as, "never eat to full stomach." Only one-half of the stomach's capacity is to be used for solid food, leaving one-quarter for liquid, and the remaining one-quarter is left empty to allow the digestive process to take place more easily.

It is also recommended to leave a gap of four to five hours between meals for the same reason. Otherwise, the blood is kept so busy working in the digestive area that other parts of the body are cheated out of their blood supply. The eyes, ears, nose, and throat particularly need good circulation. When these areas are weak and undernourished because of poor circulation, they are vulnerable to attack from bacteria and viruses that cause colds, flu, and infections. If you need to eat more often, okay, but you don't have to eat a lot. Try a light snack when your blood sugar gets low.

A person with a hypoglycemic condition whose blood sugar level fluctuates wildly because the pancreas is not able to do its job correctly, usually needs to eat something every two hours. Do read Dr. Paavo Airola's book Hypoglycemia, A Better Approach. You'd also be wise to read the book called Sugar Blues by Duffy.

You may be served the best, most delicious meal in the world, but, as my mother used to say, if it doesn't "agree with you," if you can't digest and eliminate it properly, it's probably doing more harm than good. Food is supposed to give us energy. It's supposed to be fuel for the body, feed the cells, and be transformed into blood, bones, and tissue. Whatever we eat that is not used for these purposes becomes waste matter, and needs to be eliminated. If the body cannot eliminate it fast enough, it becomes toxic and we get sick. We have literally poisoned ourselves. Whatever we eat should be digested and assimilated within 18 hours for a female and 24 hours for a male.

There's a way to tell if you're digesting your food properly or not, which could be called the "float test." If most of what you eat is being correctly utilized by the body, and is serving to heal and nourish, then what is left over as roughage will be minimal, and when you eliminate, it will float. If your stool sinks to the bottom of the toilet, then you can bet you have not gotten much real value out of your food intake.

A major factor in proper digestion takes place in your mouth. Food has to be well chewed so the digestive enzymes in the saliva can mix thoroughly with it. If you gobble your food in a hurry, you miss the crucial first step in the digestive process. Then when the food reaches the stomach,

CHEW. CHEW. CHEW!

You don't have teeth in your stomach!

it's not prepared for proper digestion to take place. Take your time eating. Try counting twenty to fifty chews per mouthful—it will really slow you down. Another tip, if you're trying to cut down on portions: wait about five minutes before taking seconds on anything. Usually that waiting period is enough for the body to recognize it really has had enough. Otherwise, when you're eating too fast, you often keep on eating when you're not actually hungry any more.

WATER. WATER. EVERYWHERE

(You Need More Than A Drop To Drink)

Another clue to good digestion: Drink lots and lots of water, but don't wash down your food by drinking any liquid immediately after you take a bite of food. Washing down your food dilutes the enzymes that are needed for proper digestion. Do your kidneys a favor, start your day with two glasses of water after you brush your teeth. (See Chapter on How to Get Up in the Morning.) Keep a pitcher of water on your desk at work, and drink water all day. Eight glasses a day aren't even enough—try for sixteen—or at least twelve. At night, just before bed, drink a glass of water. You can monitor the health of your kidneys by observing the color of your urine first thing in the morning. It should be lighter than gold. If it is darker, you're in trouble. Drink more water. Maybe it's time to get a medical check-up.

EAT TO LIVE

Okay, so what is a healthy yogic diet? Well, for one thing, it's not fanatic, or weird, or tasteless. It is a balanced combination of:

- fruits
- nuts
- vegetables
- grains
- legumes
- dairy products

Despite what most airlines think, many vegetarians do eat dairy products although we don't eat eggs. When you practice Kundalini Yoga with Breath of Fire, it tends to eliminate mucous. Therefore, you want to replenish the system with a certain amount of mucous which dairy products can stimulate. Mucous keeps the breathing passages lubricated and protects the membranes. If you are allergic to cow products, then try soy or goat substitutes. Everyone is different, you have to find what works for you.

You may have noticed that meat, fish, poultry, and eggs are not on our list of foods. You are correct. Yogis don't eat them. You don't need them. You can get all the proteins, vitamins, and minerals you need from other foods. We do our arteries a big favor by avoiding foods that clog them up. A yogic diet is a vegetarian diet. There are excellent reasons for this. Here are three of them.

THREE EXCELLENT REASONS TO EAT A VEGETARIAN DIET

EXCELLENT REASON # 1

When we eat meat we're feeding ourselves the poisonous adrenaline that was secreted by the terrified animal just before it was slaughtered.

EXCELLENT REASON # 2

Lions and tigers and other carnivores (whom

God obviously intended to eat other animals, to keep the balance of nature) are provided with fangs, claws, and a very short intestinal tract. They can process flesh very quickly and eliminate it before it putrifies and becomes toxic. Our digestive tract is very long, so we can't.

If you're worried about being weak without eating meat, think about the elephant. This great and powerful beast who feeds only on plants — lives very long, and is extremely intelligent.

If it could ever walk, run, crawl, swim, or fly away. I don't want it on my plate!

EXCELLENT REASON # 3

Meat will leave a residue of uric acid in the bloodstream. Uric acid is considered by some to be a carcinogen (cause of cancer). Uric acid is a toxin that makes it harder to reach the higher, clearer meditative states because it is an irritant in the bloodstream.

COMMON SENSE

Ancient yogic teachings prohibit the eating of flesh and of anything that is burnt, stale, or decayed. Food that is simple, wholesome, fresh, and as natural as possible is recommended.

POOR FISH !

What about fish? You've heard the expression, "poor fish!" Caught by a cruel hook in its mouth, when it is dragged painfully out of its home in the ocean, river, lake, or stream, it dies an agonizing death deprived of water. If fish is not put into water or ice immediately, it begins to decay and stink. Even after it is eaten, it still demands water. Notice how thirsty you get after eating fish? It is still demanding water. Eating fish dehydrates the body. That sagging flesh under the upper arms can be traced to eating fish. Any questions?

EGGS: YOU HAVE TO DECIDE

Okay, let's talk about eggs. Setting aside any discussion about the living or dead aspect of the potential chicken in each egg, there is a very high cholesterol level in eggs. If you want to be kind to your arteries, whether you're a yogi or not, you don't eat eggs.

THROW OUT THE STEAK?

Good grief! No meat, no fish, no chicken (that's right, no fowl either), no eggs, what am I going to eat?

A vegetarian diet does not mean to take a plate with a steak, a baked potato, and a serving of peas and throw away the steak. Nor does it mean to fill up on pasta and bread. There is a vast assortment of delicious food growing in the ground, on trees, plants, and vines to choose from. And you don't have to live on a farm to get them. Health food stores and supermarkets almost everywhere carry plenty of things that are good and good for you. Augmented with marvelous herbs and spices which add flavor and are healing as well, vegetarian meals can be glorious experiences. By following an intelligent well-balanced vegetarian diet, you can live longer, be more energetic, and even sleep better. The Hunzas are said to live longer than any other group of people in the world, and they are vegetarians.

We shouldn't forget that we live on prana. We need to get prana from the food we eat and the water we drink as well as the air we breathe. Some foods give us more prana than others, depending upon their quality and condition.

In the recipe section of this book you'll find a few of my favorite recipes that even your non-vegetarian family and friends will enjoy. I've also listed the cook-books I personally recommend to help you discover some creative and delicious meals you can make that will be kind to your body and satisfy your appetite.

For more information on meat eating, please refer to Diet For a New America by John Robbins and What's Wrong With Eating Meat? by Barbara Parham.

MUNG BEANS AND RICE ARE NICE

One of the most nourishing and easiest to digest foods is a dish called Kitcheree. It's a traditional Indian recipe made of mung beans and white basmati rice. Polished rice is not recommended because it has been stripped of its beneficial vitamin content. Brown rice is not recommended either, because it is very hard to digest unless it is cooked for many, many hours.

The mung bean is a tiny, humble little bean, dark green in color. It packs a lot of energy, and is high in protein. A basic recipe for kitcheree is in the recipe section of this book. You can vary it quite a bit to suit your own taste and creativity. One of the best things about kitcheree, besides the fact that it tastes so good, is that it contains four of the most important basic yogic foods for healing. Read on...

THE BIG FOUR: "HERB ROOT TRINITY" PLUS ONE

Onions, garlic, and ginger, often called the Herb Root Trinity, work together to cleanse the body and produce and maintain energy. The beneficial effect of each of them separately is amplified when they are cooked together.

GARLIC

You may have heard that some ascetics will not eat garlic because it makes them more sexually potent. Garlic does help produce more semen (powerful creative energy) in the body. This increased sexual energy is controlled and moreover utilized by the practice of Kundalini Yoga. So we are not afraid of it. On the contrary, we want to increase it so we can channel it upward for greater spiritual awareness.

Considered a sacred herb by the ancients, for its powerful therapeutic effect, garlic oil has been found to battle effectively against many types of viruses and bacteria. Garlic and garlic extracts have been used against gastrointestinal disorders, septic poisoning, typhus, and even cholera. In fact, garlic was known in the former Soviet Union as "Russian Penicillin"!

Best eaten raw, garlic can also be taken in capsule form (in case your friends don't share your enthusiasm for this fragrant herb). You can make a very palatable spread for toast or crackers with finely chopped raw garlic mashed into avocado. A whole bulb of baked garlic is delicious spread over toast. You just squeeze out the individual cloves, after it's baked. Very gourmet! Garlic is most at home cooked in combination with onions and ginger.

ONIONS

The onion has a well earned reputation for being a universal healing food. It not only attacks harmful bacteria and purifies the blood, but it helps build new blood. It has been recommended for such things as colds, fever, laryngitis, and diarrhea (drink onion juice mixed with hot or cold mint tea). And it has even been said, "An onion a day keeps the cancer away." If you're going to travel to any foreign country where your body will have to deal with strange and unfamiliar bacteria, eating one raw onion every day for a couple of weeks before your trip, as well as while you're away from home, will help you avoid dysentery. If you can't handle eating onions raw, at least eat them cooked. Get them into your system somehow. There is even the claim that eating raw onions helps mental clarity.

GINGER ROOT

Ginger root is both soothing and strengthening to the nerves when the body is under stress. It helps strengthen the nerve centers in the spine by nourishing the cerebrospinal fluid. You can make a delicious and revitalizing tea out of ginger root very easily. Just slice an inch or two of ginger root (available in most grocery stores, supermarkets, and of course in health food stores) and boil it in a quart of water for a few minutes. For this recipe you don't even have to peel the ginger. Just strain the tea after it has boiled for a while, and it's ready to drink. You can add sweetener and/or milk if you wish. Ginger tea is particularly useful for women to drink during menstruation. It is great as a "pick-me-up" if you're feeling droopy and debilitated. Try it. It strengthens the nerves instead of destroying them the way caffeine does.

TURMERIC

Good for the skin and mucuous membranes, especially the female reproductive organs, turmeric is one of the main ingredients in curry powder. It adds flavor and can be used in many recipes, casseroles, soups, gravies, and sauces. It's a standard ingredient in Kitcheree. The virtues of turmeric have been lavishly praised by Yogi Bhajan. One of its most important properties is that it makes the bones and joints more flexible. Just a small amount has a positive effect. See the recipe section for Golden Milk, a great beverage for you and your children. Turmeric is on the spice shelf of your supermarket. Warning: be careful not to spill it on your clothes when you're cooking, because it stains when it's wet.

Kundalini Yoga teachings recommend eating the herb root trinity, garlic, onion, and ginger daily. Also, it's a good idea to get some turmeric in you (not on you) every day and drink at least one cup of:

YOGI TEA

This section would not be complete (and as it is, it's only a tiny peek at the vast amount of information and technology available about food. The Ancient Art of Self Healing by Yogi Bhajan describes many more yogic uses of food), without a major mention of Yogi Bhajan's famous YOGI TEA recipe. Yes, it's available now commercially, in bulk or in tea bags. In 1969 Yogi Bhajan taught me how to make it from scratch. He told me how he used Yogi Tea when he was out in the field, commanding a battalion of the Indian Army. A serious epidemic of flu broke out so all the troops were being sent home from maneuvers. However, he kept his men healthy and they stayed on duty because he had them fill their thermos bottles with Yogi Tea and drink nothing else, not even water. None of them got sick.

This amazing beverage is a standard item in the 3HO way of life. If you'd like to make it from scratch, you'll find his original copyrighted recipe in this book. The fun part of making your own Yogi Tea using the different spices, as Yogi Bhanjan taught me, is that after the water comes to a boil, you add the cloves first and "watch them dance." Sure enough, they pair off, and dance around in groups of twos and threes! Then, in a minute or two, when the cloves have surrendered their essence to the water, that's when you add the other ingredients.

The black pepper is to purify the bloodstream, the milk is to soothe the colon so the black pepper doesn't irritate it. The cinnamon is for the bones, cardamom for the colon, and cloves for the nervous system. The ginger root is optional, but is highly recommended. If you want to clean out your system, you can go on a Yogi Tea fast. For one or two days—maximum three days—live on Yogi Tea. Drink as much as you want, and don't eat anything else. See how light and energetic you feel.

At least one cup of Yogi Tea per day is a great idea. Yogi Tea is more than a recipe for a good tasting drink, it is a formula for a complete self-healing tonic! Don't omit the black tea; it's part of the formula. These days, Yogi Tea also comes commercially packaged in various flavors. Ah, modern technology.

HIDDEN INGREDIENT

A most healing and effective ingredient in the food you cook, especially if you're a woman, is the VIBRATION you put into it. This is for real. It's not imaginary. When you pray and chant over food while you cook it, you enhance its power to nourish and heal.

Let me tell you a true story about vibrations going into food. A number of years ago a young woman came to stay at the 3HO center in Los Angeles to sort out her marital problems and get her life on track. She was an excellent cook, and she would prepare meals for several staff members every day. The food tasted delicious, but every afternoon after lunch we all felt sick. Finally we figured out that she was so angry all the time that it was affecting the food she cooked. We stopped eating her cooking until she came back the next year. Then, since she was in much better shape emotionally, we found we could enjoy her meals without getting sick. (Much more on the subject of the extra power of women in the chapter on women.)

Speaking of cooking, I used to worry and agonize over having to prepare meals for anyone, especially unexpected guests. I was never confident that they'd like what I made. What Yogi Bhan taught me about cooking was to "use whatever you have, and chant while you prepare the food."

Vibration really makes a difference. And, of course, Yogi Bhan is a fabulous cook. Many of his personal recipes were used in the Golden Temple Conscious Cookery Restaurants throughout the world and are included in the cook book he wrote. (See the Cookbook section of the book list.)

FOODS THAT LIKE YOU

A word in praise of zucchini. It's soooooo easy to digest, hardly seems to have any calories, and is really fast to cook. You can slice it or not and simply steam it, or you can sauté it with onions and garlic and even put tomato sauce over it.

Use lots and lots of green vegetables in your diet. Use foods that are filled with prana (life energy), such as ripe, juicy fruits and almost anything that is in season and fresh. Ideally eat fresh rather than frozen foods, and frozen rather than canned. You can squeeze lemon juice on vegetables instead of using salt. There are many salt substitutes on the market made from a combination of herbs. The yogis say to avoid salt after age thirty-five. Read labels when you buy products. Avoid MSG and other chemicals. As much as possible use foods in their natural state, in other words, the less processing the better.

HOW SWEET IT IS!

We are a sweet nation. Americans consume tons of sugar annually. Sugar depletes the system of Vitamin B. Personally, I have found, my body and my nervous system cannot tolerate white sugar. It makes me very short-tempered. If I lose my temper, I blow out my adrenals and then I get sick. It has happened enough times for me to be sure of the sequence of events, and the consequences I suffer. There are plenty of ways to avoid sugar if you're serious about it. For one thing, taste can be conditioned.

I try not to add any sweetener at all to my Yogi Tea or other beverages. There are other things to eat that can appease the desire for sweets, and that craving diminishes when you're eating enough of the good stuff that your body needs.

Applesauce cooked with cinnamon in it tastes lovely. You can use vanilla for flavor in yogurt or milk shakes. I like to put a frozen banana in the blender with milk (I use soy milk), a pinch of cinnamon, and a dash of vanilla. It can be made thick like frozen yogurt to eat with a spoon, or thinner like a shake — tastes great. For baking, maple syrup, maple sugar, or barley malt sweetener are available. Honey, although a very pure food, unfortunately is so concentrated that it can be hard on the pancreas. Some people do fine with fructose, whereas some people do not. Watch out for aspartame. It's been reported to produce unwelcome side-effects.

Did you ever notice how "hyper" children get after they have eaten the sugar candy, ice cream, or cake treats we give them? One thing I know for sure, refined white sugar causes me to suffer, so I simply don't eat it. I can vouch for the difference in my life, health, and behavior since I stopped eating sugar. Read labels carefully and proceed accordingly. Sugar can be hidden in unexpected places.

CHOCOLATE

Chocolate contains caffeine and theobromine. It is addictive. If you must have chocolate, at least try to get it sweetened with something other than white sugar. Sugar and chocolate seem to form a lethal combination. More and more people are becoming aware of the detrimental effects of sugar and chocolate, and there are a number of alternative products on the market. Check them out. You may actually like them, and they may like you, too!

The Surgeon General of the United States issues warnings saying that smoking causes cancer, but still, people smoke. So I don't expect my readers will give up their chocolate habits very easily. Some of us have weaned ourselves from chocolate by training the taste buds to enjoy carob. Some people can tolerate chocolate when it's sweetened with honey or maple syrup, but personally, I don't want to get hooked on the taste of chocolate in any form. One of the key impacts of chocolate is that it stimulates neurochemicals in us that are cortical mood alterers. It produces feelings of connection and intimacy. No wonder chocolate is addictive! When you need consolation and comfort, you might try talking to your soul, it's the greatest chocolate kiss!

CAFFEINE

Caffeine depletes the pranas, and do I really have to say anything about what caffeine does to the nervous system? A yogi usually avoids all stimulants. 'Nuff said.

ALCOHOL

For rubbing, if you need to take down a fever, alcohol can be useful. As a beverage, it acts as a stimulant — at first — and then a depressant. It causes the liver to deteriorate and damages the brain. Alcoholics Anonymous can give you plenty of information about alcohol as an addiction.

YOU SAY YOU ATE A ROCK?

If, perchance, by mistake you eat too much (we Americans tend to stuff ourselves at every opportunity, eating too much and too often), there's a way to get some relief from that overstuffed feeling. Try sitting on your heels for a few minutes. Probably best not to do this in public, unless you want to attract a crowd. But if you're at home, sit in rock pose, Vajar Asan, for a few minutes after dinner. It is said that one can digest rocks by sitting in this posture. Or, for meditation it's supposed to help you sit steady as a rock.

SELF-HEALING KRIYA FOR DIGESTION

In my youth, out of ignorance, I foolishly tried some very fanatic experiments with fasting. They left me with serious digestive problems. My digestive system was so bad that when I met Yogi Bhajan, I couldn't even drink a glass of water without suffering. He taught me Vatskar Dhouti Kriya, and told me to do it for forty days, without missing a day. It helped me tremendously. Want to try it yourself? Turn the page...

VATSKAR DHOUTI KRIYA

To Master the Digestive System

This is one of the secret kriyas in Kundalini Yoga that for centuries had been taught only to the selected few. It is surprisingly simple and quite easy to do, but I assure you it works.

(Warning: Don't do this kriya if you've just eaten, because it has to be done on an empty stomach.)

Sit in any posture with the spine straight. Make your lips round, in an "O" shape, and start inhaling the air as if you're drinking it in a series of repeated small sips. Inhale as many sips as you can possibly hold and then stop, close your mouth, hold the breath in and rotate your belly, churning your stomach with your breath held in until you can't hold the breath any more. Then very, very slowly and gently release the breath in one stream through the nose. Repeat this cycle again, inhaling in sips, holding the breath and churning the stomach, then exhaling through the nose, for a total of three cycles. This constitutes one complete kriya. According to yogic teachings, you are prohibited from practicing Vatskar Dhouti Kriya more than twice in any one day.

Note that in this kriya you are inhaling through the mouth which is an exception to the general rule of always breathing through the nose. If you want to gain control of your digestive system, practice Vatskar Dhouti Kriya once or twice a day for forty days. Don't miss a day.

MAKING A TRANSITION

I became a vegetarian in 1956, when it was suggested to me that if I stopped eating meat, my health would improve. I did, and it did. One approach to vegetarianism is to slowly and gradually substitute meatless main dishes in your meals and start eating more fresh fruits and vegetables. You could try being a vegetarian for one or two days a week at first, then gradually increase the number of days. Or there's the "cold turkey" (no pun intended) approach, such as the transition diet Yogi Bhajan gave in 1969. That diet consisted of thirty days of eating just fruits, nuts, and vegetables. Many of the students who went on it reported feeling kind of weak for the first few days, but they said after that the energy level picked up amazingly. After thirty days you add grains and dairy back into the picture, and, congratulations, you have made a graceful transition to a vegetarian diet!

THANKSGIVING

At least one day in the year, most Americans remind themselves to be grateful for the bounty we receive from the Creator. Blessed are those who give thanks every day, with every breath.

Giving thanks before we eat anything, asking the real Giver of the food to bless it, is a very valuable habit. Blessing food adds prana to it. Prayers don't always have to be eloquent and lofty. I've heard Yogi Bhajan say things like, "Thanks a lot, God, we were really hungry and you gave us food. Please bless it and bless us. Thanks."

"Vegetarians don't eat anything that had a mother."

—Yogi Bhajan

SUMMARY

To conclude this chapter, I suggest that you decide what you would like to incorporate or change in your existing pattern of eating. In any lifestyle change, it's important to be moderate and sensible rather than fanatic. If you've always been a big meat eater, don't try to become a vegetarian overnight. On the other hand, some people have successfully done it just that way. Use your own best judgment and common sense. And remember to:

- Chew every mouthful of food thoroughly.
- Drink lots of water.
- Don't eat too often, don't eat too much.
- Laugh a lot.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT!

*Tigers have fangs and long sharp claws
If they devour a deer or a lamb, they're obeying natural laws
All carnivores whom God intended to be
Have short intestinal tracts —Not long ones, like you and me.*

*Whatever we eat has to take a circuitous route
We're much better off with vegetables and fruit,
Nuts and berries, grains, milk, and cheese
Vegetarian diet designed to please.*

*If it walks, swims, or crawls
A vegetarian doesn't eat it at all
Elephants live long and carry plenty of weight
You won't find a steak on an elephant's plate.*

*Whatever you eat, make sure it digests
What's not used by the body
Must be eliminated in 18 to 24 hours—or less.*

*Some foods may have a wonderful taste,
But they produce lots of toxic waste
Uric acid in the bloodstream is carcinogenic
Roast beef may be tasty, but is flirting with cancer worth it?*

*Ayurvedic advice, a word to the wise:
Never eat to full stomach, whatever your size
Leave enough room so you can digest
Following proportions are deemed to be best:
With solid food fill half, with liquids, one quarter
This division is how the Vedas say we ought to Handle your diet for health and well-being Chew your food well, saliva you're needing.*

*No teeth in the stomach, so don't gulp it down
 Digestion starts in the mouth — and smile, don't frown!
 Laughter is the best medicine, it's medically true
 Have a sense of humor, whatever you do.*

*The human need for protein is highly overrated
 You can get all you require in the foods that I've stated
 Buy a cookbook, dare to try
 Eating to live before you die.*

*A trio of friends I'd like you to meet:
 Garlic, onions, and ginger will make your life sweet.
 Onions purify blood and fight disease
 Garlic makes you potent as semen increases
 Ginger root strengthens nerve centers in the spine
 Drinking ginger tea eases menstrual pain.*

*A dangerous spice I shall now introduce
 Be very careful in its handling and use
 When it's wet and it spills on your clothes
 It's hard to wash out (believe me I know!)*

*What is the spice that does all this?
 It's called "turmeric," put it on your shopping list.
 Fantastically healing and tasty too
 Makes bones and joints flexible—a tiny bit will do.
 Golden milk you can make, the recipe's here
 Serve it to all the folks you hold dear.*

*Yogi Tea, more than a beverage, a formula for health
 Which, as you know, you can't buy with wealth
 Each ingredient a purpose to serve
 A scientific blend, a recipe to cure.
 Help your digestion, prevent colds and flu
 No medical claims (of course), but this is what the yogis do.*

12

Creatures of Habit

There is no doubt that we are all creatures of habit. A huge proportion of what we do, how we feel, speak, relate, is simply habit. A saint has saintly habits, a criminal has criminal habits. I don't want to use the word "sinner." Thinking of themselves as sinners has caused people too much damage already. I don't subscribe to the idea of sin, except as the Vedantists say, the sin of being ignorant of your divine nature.

Habits control us so strongly that it is said we can actually change our destiny by changing our habits. According to ancient yogic wisdom, there are six specific areas of habitual behavior to be changed:

way of walking way of dealing way of talking way of eating

way of dressing

way of worship

Of course, the best way to break a habit is to replace it with a different one. This is one way yogis practice the concept of "resist not evil."

TWO KINDS OF HABITS¹

"It has been seen in our entire concept of life, that we are 15% slaves to a routine, to habit. Man must have certain habits without which his life cannot go on. But he can attain liberation by changing the character of these minimum-required habits.

"There are two kinds of habits: promoting habits and demoting habits. Demoting habits make you unhappy physically, mentally, and spiritually. Promoting habits make you happy physically, mentally, and spiritually. In your life, if you have all the habits which are promoting habits, you will end up as a liberated, divine person. If you have demoting habits, you will always end up as a physical wreck, mentally insane, and/or spiritually defunct.

"Habit is a must of your personality and mind. For that period when you are acting under a demoting habit, you are totally in the negative personality. It is also a fact that if you get into any one negative habit, you will automatically attract its four sister habits, for they love to stay together. These five demoting habits of behavior and attitude are: greed, anger, lust, attachment, and negative ego. When one sister enters the house, she calls the others to join.

It takes 40 days to establish a habit, 90 days to confirm it, 120 days—everyone will know it!

"Each habit is supported on two tripods:

- Physical, Mental, and Spiritual,
- Past, Present, and Future.

"There are two guiding instincts in man. He is either improving his future or blocking his future improvement. If you are conscious of this, and have an honest and sincere urge to improve your future, you will always have promoting habits. Oh man, if you are to care not even for God, at least care for the future. When you care enough for your future to have promoting habits, you will become a liberated person.

"A liberated person is always a happy person. He does not lack in any material comfort. He does not know any power on Earth which can insult him. He lives in grace in this world and when he leaves the body he is respected for generations to follow. Everyone can be like that.

"Yesterday's greatest sinner can be a saint this minute. The only thing required is a decision: 'Am I to guard my future and choose to be a liberated person, or am I to block my future and go by the material-physical aspect of the world?' ...Maintain a positive attitude with promoting habits for forty days, and you can change your destiny."

There is a fundamental meditation that works on changing habit patterns. It's called the SA-TA-NA-MA meditation. You'll find the original form, in which Yogi Bhajan first taught it, in this book. Later he gave a beautiful visualization technique to practice with it. I've included that for you as an optional bonus-extra. I think you will enjoy it.

You will also find a breath meditation designed to help control addictive behavior (habits).

SUGGESTED PROMOTING HABIT

Do one special meditation every day for forty days. Keep a diary of your progress, and the changes you go through.

13

Drugs

"The Chinese took opium and lost their civilization. Indians took marijuana and lost their civilization. The Egyptians used peyote and other herbs and they lost their civilization. The Greeks and Romans lost their civilization with alcohol. The United States has them all."

—Yogi Bhaian

Why do people take drugs? To get out of facing reality. But drugs take you to non-reality. The use of drugs has become so widespread now, it's even considered "fashionable." Yet thousands of people continue to die from drugs and thousands of lives, careers, and marriages are destroyed by drug abuse. Babies are born already addicted because their mothers were users. The new "designer" drugs are even more lethal and dangerous than the drugs commonly used in the '60s. In 1994 a promising young actor, just twenty-two years old, River Phoenix, collapsed in front of a club in Beverly Hills and died shortly thereafter, another victim — of what? Drugs? Ignorance? Arrogance? ("It won't happen to me.") Social pressure?

When Yogi Bhaian arrived in Los Angeles in December of 1968, the "drug culture" was a way of life for almost an entire young generation. They had started taking drugs in order to find God. They had rejected society's material values and they wanted to experience spirit. Yes, they wanted to get "high," but for the majority it was a sincere spiritual quest, not just thrill-seeking.

Unfortunately, they didn't know the results of taking those drugs. They didn't know how much they would suffer from the side-effects. Out of twenty million young people, millions died, were permanently damaged, or went insane.

For those of you who were not there and do not remember the 60s (and for those of you who were there and do not remember the 60s), the following quote from Yogi Bhaian will illustrate the point:

"There is a possibility that some of you might feel, once in a while, to remember the '60s. Some of you are very innocent. You do not understand. I was addressing one situation today. At one time that person had taken so much drugs that the neurons in the brain were damaged. You have seven plates of neurons. If a plate is damaged because of acceleration and contraction, you can understand the subtle damage. It is just like a car which has a very weak battery. The caffeine, the stimulants, and all these things, at that moment may help you. But over a long time, they damage you."

When the Siri Singh Sahib, then known simply as "Yogiji," saw the condition the young people were in from having taken drugs, his compassion was aroused and impelled him to teach them Kundalini Yoga. He knew it was the fastest way to heal their bodies and minds, and give them the spiritual awakening they were seeking. He decided to teach Kundalini Yoga publicly, in spite of the fact that traditionally, because of the power it gives, it was forbidden to do so.

He understood their drive to use drugs was an attempt to change their consciousness, to fill an inner emptiness. They took drugs because they had not been taught any other way to take control of their inner lives. Drugs were a rejection of inner pain and stagnant mental states. But drugs did not provide a way to build any real basis for a new consciousness. He knew that Kundalini Yoga creates immediate, actual changes in consciousness. Although many drug users thought of Kundalini Yoga as another way to get "high," it is a way to becoming the higher self! It is getting out of pain, subconscious turmoil, and boredom. It does give you energy from within that cannot be given or created by any outside substance.

Yogi Bhajan knew that by doing Kundalini Yoga, the students would not only experience an even higher "high," but they would be repairing their nervous system and brain. He said it would take three years of doing Kundalini Yoga and eating a healthy diet to repair the damage that drugs had done. That was the beginning of the 3HO Drug Rehabilitation Program. We even stamped all of our 3HO outgoing mail with the slogan:

"Make this a drug-free nation.
Help the 3HO Foundation."

Yogi Bhajan never told students outright to stop taking drugs, but he pointed out the effects of taking them, and he gave simple things to do as an alternative:

When you feel the urge for some stimulant, take seven long deep breaths, holding each inhalation to the maximum. Or (if you're not out in public, that is), do Breath of Fire. It is the most powerful remedy!

"If you do a half-hour of Breath of Fire every day, there are a lot of troubles that you can keep miles away.¹"

He let people discover for themselves they could get higher on Kundalini Yoga than on anything else. He pointed out that it's a permanent spiritual experience. There are no damaging side-effects. It's also legal and less expensive than drugs. Not only did every yoga class help heal past damage, but it gave an immediate "up" experience.

Armed with Yogi Bhajan's masterful technology, a special full-care, drugless 3HO Drug Rehabilitation facility in Tucson, Arizona, was begun. Staffed by qualified professionals, it evolved into "SuperHealth," a haven for anyone wanting to relax, rejuvenate, and regenerate. Using Kundalini Yoga as the main feature of the program, guests or clients were given massage, counseling, diet, and motivational techniques to improve the quality of their lives.

When you feel the urge for a stimulant take seven long deep breaths, holding each inhalation to the maximum. Or (if you're not out in public, that is), do Breath of Fire. It is the most powerful remedy!

"Recreational drugs" is an oxymoron.
Drugs neither create nor re-create, they destroy.

MARIJUANA

Not even marijuana is "safe." Marijuana attacks the nerve centers in the spine. Therefore, the entire nervous system, all 72,000 nerves in the body, are damaged. Another major effect of marijuana is damage to the memory function.

The two hemispheres of the brain expand and contract depending upon the activity of the nostrils. What happens when a person smokes "pot" is that whichever nostril is "open" expands the corresponding hemisphere of the brain. This creates the euphoric experience and the distortion of space perception and vision, "spaciness." The problem is that whenever the brain is affected by drugs, its usual control factor of the expansion and contraction is destroyed. From then onward, whether the person is smoking "grass" or not, that hemisphere can expand any time, any place. People get spaced out, forget what they are doing from one moment to the next. My observation was that marijuana made the most intelligent people incompetent and undependable. Marijuana stimulates the brain cells and it constricts the spinal fluid.

Yogi Bhajan pointed out to us that marijuana grows wild in India, but nobody bothers to smoke it anymore, because they know its disastrous effects.

SLEEPING PILLS

Thirty-five million people in this country cannot sleep at night. Many take sleeping pills. Sleeping pills make you neurotic, because they make the body sleep, but they do not let the subconscious sleep. Everything gets pushed into the unconscious. And when things get put into the unconscious, man is a living "crazy." He has absolutely no nervous control system. The parasympathetic doesn't even come through. And there's not yet a medicine which can cure this disease, because they do not deal with the root cause.

They just cover the surface.

Yogiji taught us the yogic procedure for how to go to sleep at night without pills, sleep better and deeper, and wake up refreshed. You can read all about it in the chapter on Sleep.

CYCLES OF LIFE

Human beings have three distinct time periods, or cycles when major changes take place. These are in the realms of consciousness (seven years), intelligence (eleven years), and physical (eighteen years).

During the first eighteen years of life, the body is growing, so it seems as if we can get away with just about anything without noticing any ill effects. Kids can eat junk food, go without sleep, get no exercise, even smoke and drink, and still feel pretty good. From eighteen to thirty-six the body goes on reserve and so it still seems as if we can get away with unhealthy habits because the body is using its strong recuperative power to adjust and adapt. But after the age of thirty-six, look out! All the damage we have done, all the abuse and the neglect of the health of our physical body comes back to haunt us. We're no longer on reserve. The body starts to manifest the effects of all the past misuse and abuse. We get the aches and pains: bursitis, arthritis, and digestive problems that seem to come with age. It's not age folks, it's deficiency.

Fortunately, it's never too late to try to improve conditions. Even if you are over thirty-six, don't despair. By practicing Kundalini Yoga you have already begun to mend and repair, heal, and strengthen your body.

Kundalini Yoga is not necessarily "easy" —because you have to DO it, you don't just pop a pill in your mouth, or stick a needle in your arm. Two of Yogi Bhajan's earliest sayings are worth quoting here. They are true!

There's no freedom which is free.
There's no liberation without labor.

"I know you may have taken LSD, you may have taken PCP, but you can get rid of the after-effects of these drugs if you are honest with sadhana, (regular daily spiritual practice). This is how it works. These kinds of drugs, stimulants, uppers, downers (include sleeping pills in this category), no matter what they are, control the opening and closing capacity of the working of the brain's metabolism. It is permissible to take a drug only under dire medical emergency. Otherwise, in any normal functioning brain, when you take drugs, you make it function abnormally. A lot of people who stick to sadhana (See chapter on Sadhana) have been found to be totally clear of the effects and abnormalities created by the use of drugs. An abnormality includes any physical, mental, or spiritual abnormality. That is why sadhana has been designated and designed in three parts: one part relates to the physical, the second part relates to the mental, and the third part relates to the spiritual. We want to dispense this every morning with the idealistic thought that the person may gradually benefit from it.

"If you have to be addicted to something, be addicted to doing sadhana daily. Otherwise, addiction is not a source of freedom. And you are not free by taking drugs. The neurons of the brain will become feeble. Take the drugs. What's it to me? But it's you who will lose your nostril pituitary sensitivity. You can never smell the subtlety of life. You'll always be dragging your life."²

COCAINE

Cocaine gives a person a false sense of invincibility, and that, of course, is especially appealing to young people. I guess they don't believe all the statistics that demonstrate that cocaine is an addiction that is usually fatal. Or maybe they believe it but they think it can't happen to them. We all tend to think that disasters happen to "other people," not to us.

HABIT OR ADDICTION?

Behavior patterns are the result of the radiance of the psyche and frequency of the magnetic field in relationship to the universal psyche and magnetic force. When I first heard Yogi Bhanjan explain this, I had to write it down and read it over and over to understand it. What is important to understand is that we all have habit patterns. We could not function without them. However, we often outgrow the patterns that we've created. We change, so we want to change our patterns. Or, we want to change because we know that by changing our habit patterns, we can change our lives!

Whether it's overeating, taking drugs, smoking, drinking, or gambling, we can get into habits that can be very self-destructive. How to change these patterns? Increase your frequency.

The tool for doing this is the mantra SA TA NA MA which is the nuclear form of the seed sound, SAT NAM. Mantra means mind projection. It is a technical device for regulating the mind. (See chapter on Mantra.) The SA TA NA MA meditation was introduced in the Let's Talk About Food chapter, and referred to again in Creatures of Habit. Here's more information about why these syllables are so effective.

Seed sounds or "Bij" mantras are sounds which totally rearrange the habit patterns of the subconscious mind. By vibrating the sound current of SAT NAM you activate that particular energy in the mind that erases and establishes habits. It represents the sound embodiment of Truth itself: SAT (truth) is the reality of what exists and NAM (name, identity) is the vibration which creates what it names. SA TA NA MA is the basic evolutionary force in the human psyche, and its effect is the same as splitting the atom.

SA is the infinite, the beginning. TA is life: from the infinite comes life and existence. NA is death: from life comes death or change. From death comes the Consciousness of the joy of the infinite, which leads back to life, MA, or rebirth.

Turn the page for a meditation for Breaking Addiction, using this "Bij" mantra...

"Difficult things take a long time:
The impossible takes a little longer."³

BREAKING ADDICTION

By Rearranging Your Subconscious Mind

In this meditation, the thumbs rest against the temples. The pressure exerted by the thumbs triggers a rhythmic reflex current directly underneath the stem of the pineal gland. It is imbalance in this obscure area that makes mental and physical addiction seemingly unbreakable.

Imbalance in the area below the pineal upsets the pulsating radiance that regulates the pituitary gland. Since the pituitary regulates the rest of the glandular system, the entire body and mind go out of balance when the pineal is dormant. This meditation corrects the problem. It is excellent for everyone, but particularly effective for rehabilitation efforts in drug dependence, mental illness, and phobic conditions.

Although this meditation will produce results within 5 to 7 minutes, work up to a maximum of 31 minutes a day. Human habit patterns are set or broken in forty-day cycles. More deeply ingrained patterns may take longer to correct.

Once the pineal gland has started secreting, it will give you radiance. It will free you from old patterns.

Sit in a comfortable pose. Straighten the spine and make sure the first six lower vertebrae are locked forward. Make fists of both hands and extend the thumbs out straight. Place the thumbs on the temples where there is a small indentation about an inch beyond the eyebrows. This is the lower anterior portion of the frontal bone above the temporal-sphenoidal suture.

Lock the back molars together and keep the lips closed. Vibrate the jaw muscles by alternating the pressure on the molars with the rhythm of SA TA NA MA. A muscle will move under the thumbs. Feel it massage the thumbs and apply a firm pressure with the hands.

Keep the eyes closed and look toward the brow point. Silently vibrate the syllables SA TA NA MA there. Continue 5 to 7 minutes, working up to 31 minutes over a period of daily practice sessions.

14

Sleep

“Sleep that knits up the ravell’d sleeve of care.”¹

Have you ever had insomnia? Have you ever had to take sleeping pills? Do you sometimes wake up in the morning feeling as if you’ve been run over by a ten-ton truck, or stepped on by an elephant? Do you think you need more sleep? Do you wish you could get along on less sleep? This chapter is for you!

The purpose of sleep is to allow the body and the mind to rest, recuperate, regenerate — and do some self-healing. You should wake up rested, refreshed, and alert, ready to face the day. Do you?

FOUR STAGES OF SLEEP

There are several stages of sleep:

1. The first stage is the tossing and turning and worrying stage. It's a big waste of time and energy. It's not necessary to go through it at all, if you prepare yourself properly for sleep!

2. Next is usually a light dream, "reverie" stage (also not required), from which you go into an even more energy-draining stage:

3. Dream state. You may think you enjoy your dreams, but the fact is that whatever adventures you experience while you're dreaming take ten times more energy out of you than if the events actually happened while you were awake. No wonder you wake up exhausted. Especially if you're being chased by tigers, or attacked by monsters from outer space. We don't need to experience this state either. What we want to do, what we're aiming to reach, is:

4. The deep, dreamless sleep state. It is only in this fourth stage of sleep that we are actually rejuvenated, and our batteries get recharged.

Exploding the eight-hour myth.

HOW MUCH SLEEP DO I NEED?

Now that you're not going to waste precious time in the first three stages of sleep, you don't need eight hours of "sleep," honest!

Here's why: When your breath becomes erratic, when it is not slow and steady, it tears down your nervous system. After between four and a half to five and a half hours of sleep, your rate of breathing changes, so it's not a good idea to sleep any longer than that at one stretch. The deep sleep state actually only lasts a maximum of two and a half hours. The faster you can access the deep sleep stage, the less time you have to spend in the other stages. However, most of us take a little while to get into the deep sleep state and a little while to come out.

A healthy, full-grown adult living a reasonably healthy lifestyle really doesn't need to sleep more than five and a half hours! (It is said that those who have perfected their sleep skills can get all the benefits they need in only 31 minutes!)

Such great achievers as Madame Curie and Thomas Edison were known for their ability to take periodic "cat naps." They never slept for long hours at a time. One of the yogic powers much to be desired is the conquest of sleep! Being able to rejuvenate yourself in just a few minutes is a great asset in life. According to an article in the L.A. Times,² "President John F. Kennedy used to work in the Oval Office until 2 or 3 a.m. and then get up at 7:30 a.m., with daily one-hour naps. President Clinton tries to get by on five hours and a nap. Salvador Dali felt he only needed four hours of sleep a day. When overtired, he used to sit holding a spoon over a tin plate on the floor. When he fell asleep, he'd drop the spoon, waking himself up, claiming to be completely refreshed. Leonardo Da Vinci decided to sleep five minutes every four hours, a total of a half-hour each day. After five months he gave up—reporting that he felt all tingly around the head and was biting his tongue frequently—and went back to his regular four hours."

Well, obviously, Da Vinci went a bit overboard. However, we can learn how to relax so completely that just an eleven-minute nap can do wonders (in addition to a good yogic night's sleep, of course). In fact, taking two such eleven minute naps every day is highly recommended, especially for women.³

Unfortunately, many of us go to bed so loaded with anxiety that our minds keep going over and over the same problems and concerns, like a broken record. We even worry about whether we'll be able to go to sleep or not, and that keeps us awake. If we do fall asleep, it's a restless sleep.

It's a vicious circle: if our sleep is restless, then our rate of breathing becomes erratic. If the breath is erratic, the mind is disturbed. If we are mentally disturbed in sleep, the deep sleep stage may never be reached. Result: We wake up more tired than when we went to bed.

EAST-WEST IS BEST

For maximum efficiency and benefit from sleep, place your bed so that it is positioned east/west. Yes, you want to sleep in a line that cuts across the earth's magnetic field.

Just as the needle of a compass is always pulled toward the north, your personal energy will get swallowed up by the pull of the earth's magnetic field unless you sleep with your electromagnetic field at right angles to it. Positioning your bed north/south could be the reason you wake up tired and grouchy in the morning.

Your entire nervous system is affected by the direction in which you sleep. It doesn't matter which end your head is at, the important thing is to have the lines of force in your body going east-west. East-West is Best!

"Two worst enemies of your spine are automobiles and SOFT BEDS." We all need to walk more and drive less.

BE KIND TO YOUR SPINE

A soft bed may feel cozy, but to support your spine properly, and get the best night's sleep, you need a very firm surface to sleep on. This isn't meant to torture you. It's not necessary (or even desirable) to sleep on a bed of nails. But if you want to give maximum relaxation to your entire nervous system, you have to give maximum support to your spinal column. All 72,000 nerves in your body are connected to those twenty-six vertebrae in your spine.

So, "Good-bye waterbed," "So long, thick feather mattress!"

Get the firmest mattress you can find. Or try a three-inch futon or foam pad. You need to get rid of soft, non-supporting beds in order to experience the rest and relaxation you need and deserve. Many people who can afford every luxury still choose to sleep with only a Persian rug and a sheepskin for padding on a carpeted floor!

Okay, now you know how to get your bed ready. There's more to do before you get into it.

SIX STEPS TO PREP FOR SLEEP

First, make sure you've done some good strenuous exercise during the day, so that your physical body is ready and eager to rest. Everybody needs to exercise enough to sweat every day. A walk before bedtime is wonderful.

Second, don't eat a heavy meal just before bedtime. If your stomach is full, the digestive process will demand a lot of activity, just when all systems should be slowing down for sleep.

Third, brush your teeth to get rid of bacteria-forming food particles. Brush the root of the tongue also, to clear out pockets of mucous at the back of the throat.

Fourth, don't go to bed thirsty. Drink at least one or two glasses of water before you go to sleep, even if you have to get up during the night to go to the bathroom. That is better than going to sleep thirsty. When the body is dehydrated, it demands water. That demand will disturb the mind, preventing proper rest and can even cause bad dreams. Children, who have pretty good instincts (until we stifle them), usually ask for a glass of water before bedtime. Give it to them.

Fifth, run some cold water over your feet, or soak them in cold water. Yes, COLD water! Then dry them vigorously with a towel. This will stimulate the 72,000 nerve endings in the sole of each foot and help get your nervous system ready for deep relaxation and sleep. To make this even more effective, you're going to massage your feet as soon as you get into bed. Or, better yet (and this is the ultimate luxury), get someone to give you a foot massage! But wait, don't lie down yet, there are still a few more preliminary steps.

Sixth, exercise. Having made all these preparations, brushed your teeth, had a glass of water, and washed your feet, it's very useful to do a few Kundalini Yoga exercises.

Other ways to set yourself for successful sleep are to:

- Read something inspirational
- Say your prayers
- Meditate
- Turn on your auto-reverse tape recorder and play some beautiful meditative music while you sleep. Subliminal tapes do work.
- Now you're ready for a big treat. It's your foot massage!

If you don't have anyone handy to give you a foot massage, you can do it yourself. (Complete instructions in the Things To Do section.) By the way, if you want your husband, wife, sweetheart, child, parent, or sibling to totally adore you, give them a foot massage! It is the kindest, most soothing, comforting act of healing.

There's one more very important thing to do before you go to sleep:

To be sane, two things you need to do every day: SWEAT & LAUGH!

(Maybe you can laugh while you're out walking!)

Before you go to sleep, take all your worries, concerns, ideas, and problems, wrap them up in a package and put them on a shelf in your mind labeled, "G - O - D." Leave them there. You'll be amazed at how many are gone, solved, and improved by the time you wake up. The whole package may have vanished!

Don't forget to set your mental timer to wake you up in the morning. Yes, your subconscious mind has a great sense of time. It will respond to your directive. Just before you go to sleep, tell yourself what time you're going to wake up. At first you'll probably also want to use an alarm clock, just for insurance. You'll be surprised how quickly you can develop your own internal wake-up system. This ability will come in handy when you want to practice "How to Wake Up in the Morning" the yogic way.

In the Beginners Kundalini Yoga Series, I teach a special breath meditation to practice at bedtime. It's in the Things To Do section, along with some exercises that work well at bedtime.

Now you're ready for the yogic secret to deep sleep:

FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO DEEP, DREAMLESS SLEEP

Even if you haven't followed all the preliminary steps to the letter (but you're wise if you do!), you can still try this routine when you finally do lie down:

1. Lie on your stomach and turn your head so that your right cheek is on the pillow (or the bed as you prefer). This will automatically free up your left nostril to bring in the cooling, soothing, calming energy.

2. Start long deep breathing, inhaling maximum, exhaling maximum. Of course, you are ONLY breathing through your nose, keeping your mouth closed. Breathe consciously. Concentrate on making each breath as long and deep as you can. Think the sound SAT as you inhale, and NAM as you exhale.

3. After a few long deep breaths, use your arm or hand to completely block your right nostril. Continue long deep breathing only through the left nostril.

4. When you feel yourself reaching a slight stage of drowsiness, which usually takes about ten complete breaths, turn over onto your back or your side as you wish, depending upon how you are most comfortable. Continue long deep breathing until you are fast asleep! By the way, it is better for your heart and your digestion to sleep on the right side than the left. Plus, of course, it keeps your left nostril open.

As soon as the breath becomes regular and slow, you will go quickly through the preliminary stages of sleep and almost immediately reach the deep dreamless sleep state, avoiding the energy draining dream stage altogether. Plus you'll be able to come back out of deep sleep more easily and gracefully when it's time to wake up.

TECHNICAL STUFF

In case you're interested, here's a more scientific explanation of the yogic terms for some stages of sleep as described by MSS Gurucharan Singh Khalsa, Ph.D., who knows all the technical terms. I just know what works!

Awake is normal awareness of earth and defining the self by circumstances and outer objects.

Jugarat (or however it is spelled) is the self with the sense of the inner world: dreams, images, psychic impressions, the subconscious storages of self.

Soopan is heavy dream stage. (Very exhausting!)

Skoopat, or dreamless, is beyond the pull of the five elements and into the sense of merged spirit where identity is not based on the world.

Turiya is awakened sleep. Awake as Infinite Spirit and aware of the other realms of self. That is why Yogi Bhajan says he knows nothing about dreams. "I never had one." He has a state of Turiya in which Reality of Self is always present. The subconscious absorption into dreams and symbols is not needed. A symbol experienced in Turiya is a vision or an intuition.

*S*LEEPY TIME SONG

*Shakespeare said t'was "Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care—"
I guess he never had insomnia, nor dreamed he was chased by a bear*

*Sweet dreams are not so sweet at all
They take ten times the energy to run or fall
T'would take if t'were happening awake
So, yogis say, "avoid dreaming, for heaven's sake!"*

*Drink some water at bedtime we recommend
Give your stomach a rest — it will be your friend*

*Put your troubles on a shelf before you retire
Mark it "G-O-D" and see what transpires
In the morning they may be gone forever
Meanwhile, forget them overnight - aren't you clever?*

*Breathing slower and slower, your mind slows down too
Left nostril engaged, sweet Morpheus woo
Deeper and deeper you drift away
To awake refreshed to a brand new day*

*Prepare your body, instruct your mind
Sleeping becomes a pleasure you'll find!*

*A foot massage is a bonus delight
Sets your nerves at peace for the night
(Wash feet first in cold water - feels great)
Play your auto-reverse with an inspiring tape*

*Firm mattress placed east and west
(Yogis concur, this is the best)
Do some exercise — you can't go wrong
And this is the end of my Sleepytime song!*

15

How to Get Up in the Morning

"When you wake, tell yourself you are bountiful, blissful, and beautiful:

Bountiful—when you know your soul

Blissful—neither pain nor pleasure affects you

Beautiful—in adversity you speak the language of prosperity

Do you think to give thanks for your arms and your legs? Your eyes and ears? In those moments as you come out of the sleep state, acknowledge how wonderful is this vehicle the Creator manufactured for you to use during your visit to planet Earth."

—Yogi Bhajan

THE WAY THE YOGIS DO IT...

You can, of course, set an alarm, have a wake-up service phone you, or ask someone to call you. But ideally (if you're smart), you will have consciously set your inner alarm the night before by telling your sub-conscious what time you want to get up. The subconscious mind has a very accurate sense of time and will be happy to serve you!

Always come out of sleep slowly and gradually.
No sudden moves! Be kind to your nervous system.

If you leap out of bed when the alarm rings, that abrupt transition from sleep to waking is a shock that damages your nervous system. Instead of the jumping-jack scenario, when it's time to wake up, try this:

KEEP YOUR EYES CLOSED

Inhale very deeply and stretch your arms way up and back over your head. Take a few long deep breaths, s-t-r-r-r-e-t-c-h-i-n-g your spine, and then do a:

CAT STRETCH

Bend one knee up to your chest and swing it across the front of your body to touch the bed on the opposite side; then do the same thing with the other knee. Twist and turn and bend to the maximum. This is good for your circulation and for the nervous system. You are letting the electromagnetic field balance itself.

Stretching first thing in the morning is a major factor in helping you go through the day balanced and calm. Be sure to do it.

THE EYES HAVE IT !

You've done all the stretching with your eyes closed. Now, lying flat on your back, put the palms of your hands tightly over your closed eyes. Then, but not until then, open your eyes, look directly into the palms of your hands. Slowly — very slowly, continue to gaze at your palms (reading your fortune?) as you lift your hands straight up to about eighteen inches above your face. This gives your optic nerve a chance to adjust gradually to the light and distance, and helps to keep your eyesight strong. Protect your eyesight, always avoid any sudden shock of light.

WAKE UP YOUR FACE

From the eighteen-inch height, bring your fingertips down to the center of your forehead, and with a circular motion, massage your forehead from the center out to the temples and down both sides of the face to the tip of your chin. (There are special pressure points on either side of the chin, which are lunar centers.) Now massage your nose and your ears, squeeze your nostrils and your ear lobes briefly to get the circulation going. Take a few more long deep breaths to open up your lungs and get ready for:

STRETCH POSE

Lying on your back, legs straight, bring your heels together and lift your head and your heels about six inches off the bed (twelve inches, maximum), balancing on your buttocks, while keeping your eyes open and focusing steadily on your big toes (or the blankets covering the toes!). Hold the position for one minute with Breath of Fire. Arms are held straight at your sides, palms facing your thighs, but not touching. (Sort of like a sentry at Buckingham Palace, except that you can smile.) If your eyes water, that's OK, it's good lubrication for them. If your body shakes, that's okay. It indicates the nervous system is adjusting. If you can't maintain stretch pose for the full minute, do it in segments, even if it's only ten seconds at a time. Just do the best you can, and keep trying! It's time well spent because:

Stretch pose adjusts your navel point. Since the navel is the focal point for all 72,000 nerves in the body, stretch pose is a tune-up for your whole nervous system as well as your digestive system. It also strengthens your reproductive organs and glands (the seat of your creativity and productivity).

NOSE TO KNEES

After one minute of stretch pose, relax for about 15 seconds and then bend your knees to your chest, wrap your arms around them and hold them tight against your body, lift your head and put your nose right in between your knees. In this position do Breath of Fire for 30 seconds to one minute, pumping your navel. This stimulates the apana (out-going life breath) and helps your elimination. Just as prana is not breath itself, but carried on the incoming life breath, apana is the eliminating force of the body, carried on the outgoing, or eliminating breath. It is the cleansing breath of life that gets rid of the toxins. Add to the benefit of this exercise by mentally repeating the mantra WAHE GURU or SAT NAM over and over in your mind, synchronized with the breath. Hear it loud and clear as you inhale and exhale. Then inhale deeply, exhale, and relax the breath as you...

HAVE A HEART!

Keeping your knees tightly clasped to your chest, turn briefly onto your right side and rest for a minute or two. This posture strengthens the heart.

Warning: this posture may be dangerous—you're liable to fall back to sleep and be late for work.

TAKE A WALK

Now you're ready to get out of bed and walk to the bathroom. Don't put on your slippers yet. It's better to go barefoot, so that your body can discharge any excess electromagnetic energy you've accumulated overnight. The first stretching you did in bed was to break through the "cocoon" of your individual electromagnetic field and reestablish contact with earth. Touching the walls and touching the faucets with both hands will help continue the process of "grounding yourself" for the day ahead.

BATHROOM ALERT

As we explain in the chapter called, "Let's Talk About Food," when you go to the toilet first thing in the morning, you can verify how well you are digesting your food by looking to see if your stool floats. If it does, it means your body has gotten the benefit of all the food value in whatever you ate, and it is just eliminating what it could not use to build blood, bone, and tissue. If your stool sinks, then something is wrong, either with your diet or with your digestive system, and probably both. And, you can tell by the color of your urine how your kidneys are doing. The color should not be darker than gold.

BRUSH YOUR TONGUE

Not just to whiten and brighten your teeth, but for the sake of your health, here is a yogic recipe for oral hygiene: Take two parts powdered potassium alum¹ mixed with one part of common household salt and use it like tooth powder to brush your teeth. More importantly, brush the root of your tongue. Why?

During the night, your mouth turns into an incubator, warm, moist, and cozy. In that environment, bacteria have an orgy and they multiply like crazy. Unless you get rid of that toxic accumulation, you will swallow it with the first sip of liquid. So, to avoid poisoning yourself, use your toothbrush and reach way back to the root of your tongue until you gag and cough up that disease-producing mucous. The two little glands back there called "monkey glands" need to be cleaned out.

Another benefit is that as you gag, it makes your eyes water. Ancient yogis called that "cataract" water, and said that it helps preserve the eyesight. So, a word to the wise: use this astringent combination of alum and salt every morning. I keep the mixture in a clean, dry, empty mustard jar. I pour a little, about the size of a quarter, in the palm of one hand, wet my toothbrush and dip it in. You can finish with your favorite toothpaste on your teeth, if you wish. I do.

OIL AND WATER. THE BEST MIXTURE

Next on the morning agenda is the biggest challenge of the day, the ever popular 3HO trademark, the COLD SHOWER! But first, before you get under the shower, yes, before you get wet, massage your body all over with a little oil. Oil is more easily absorbed by the skin when it is mixed with water—and you won't be greasy afterwards. Almond oil is highly recommended since the almond contains so many minerals, and it nourishes the body through the pores of your skin. Go for it! When the cold water hits the surface of your skin (which has four layers) all the blood from way deep inside your body rushes to the surface in self-defense, vastly improving your circulation on the spot. This is called hydrotherapy. It strengthens your entire nervous system. People pay huge sums of money for what is now called "Hydrothermal therapy," when in reality all you need is your own two hands, cold water, and courage.

An added benefit is that you will probably become very holy the moment the cold water hits your body, because it is very likely you will shout, "Oh my God!" You might try exclaiming, "Wahe Guru" ("Wow, God is Great!") or "Ang Sang Wahe Guru" ("God lives in every limb of my being.") Remembering God is always a blessing.

Go in and out of the water four times, constantly massaging your body until the water no longer feels cold. Be sure to get the arm-pits (major nerve centers) and the insides of the thighs. You can even stand on one foot and massage the top of it with the other foot, but don't slip or trip! Women, be sure to massage your breasts.

Then, your first victory of the day achieved, dry off briskly with a rough towel till the body really shines; put on loose, comfortable exercise clothing, and you're ready to do your sadhana, your personal daily spiritual practice. (See Sadhana: Your Spiritual Bank Account.) God bless you, you're bound to have a wonderful day!

Note, for women, there are exceptions to the shower rule! One: Don't take cold showers during your monthly period. Two: No cold showers after the seventh month of pregnancy; take lukewarm, body-temperature showers instead. From the one hundred-twentieth day (when the new soul enters the womb) until the seventh month, give the baby a cold shower with a very good massage, but not more than three minutes, and you will help build a very strong, disease-free baby!

"It's not the life that matters.
it's the courage you bring to it." ²

If you really love hot showers, wonderful. Take them at night, or sometime when you can wrap up afterwards in lots of blankets and sweat for at least an hour or two. But in the morning, cold water is your best friend. The morning shower is for your circulation, and stimulation of your nervous and glandular systems.

16

Sadhana: Your Spiritual Bank Account

Envy of the Angels

(Angels Can't Do Sadhana)

It has been said that even the angels envy us because it is only when a being has evolved into the human form (after 8.4 million lifetimes in other forms), that he/she can be liberated from the cycle of birth and death. No other life form has this opportunity. Not even the angels.

To experience liberation we have to expand our awareness beyond the limitations of our individual consciousness. Only then can we merge into the vastness of the Universal Self, which is our true identity. That expansion takes courage and consistent effort. It takes work.

"THERE IS NO LIBERATION WITHOUT LABOR¹"

The main work toward liberation is called sadhana. Sadhana is the base, the foundation of all spiritual endeavor. Sadhana is your personal, individual spiritual effort. It is the main tool you use to work on yourself to achieve the purpose of life. It can be done alone or with a group. Sadhana is whatever you do consistently to clear your own consciousness so you can relate to the infinity within you. To cover all your bases, it will include exercise, meditation, and prayer.

Before you face the world each day, before you go into your kitchen to fix breakfast, before you ride your bike to school, jog to your office, or get in your car to fight the battle of the freeways: do yourself a favor and tune up your nervous system and attune yourself to your highest inner self.

The power of your sadhana is enhanced by doing it with other people. To go from individual to universal consciousness, we have to go through group consciousness. Group sadhana develops group consciousness. You will find that communication and dealings with the people who do sadhana with you is much easier than with other people, because you have created an harmonious inner avenue of communication.

Have you hugged your soul today?

AMBROSIAL HOURS — RIGHT TIME / RIGHT PLACE

There are certain times of the day that are best suited for meditation: the ideal time slot is four o'clock to seven o'clock in the morning. Then, to make a positive transition from day to night-time, four to seven in the evening,

During what are called the "ambrosial hours" (the two and a half hours just before sunrise), when the sun is at a sixty-degree angle to the earth, the energy you put into your sadhana gets maximum results. Your world is quieter. It's easier to meditate and concentrate before the hustle and bustle of the day begins. This is the time we need to be awake to receive that first solar energy of the day. "Any fool can sleep, but wise is that one who rises before the sun."²

ARE YOU THINKING. "I CAN'T GET UP THAT EARLY!"?

If you absolutely cannot get up early in the morning to do sadhana, then do it some other time! Doing sadhana at any time of the day or night will benefit you. However, it is a fact that the optimum time is during the ambrosial hours. As Yogi Bhanjan says, "If you can't have the best, make the best of what you have." If you can't do sadhana for two and a half hours, do it for an hour; if you can't do it for an hour, do it for thirty-one minutes, or eleven minutes. If you don't want to do the sadhana outlined in this book, do some other sadhana, but for God's sake—and your sake—do something!

ONE HOLY MAN'S SPECIAL SADHANA

Once there was a very holy man who lived in a cave high in the mountains of the Himalayas. He practiced austerities and penances for many years. Every morning he would appear at the cave entrance just before sunrise, and stand waiting for the first rays of dawn to appear over the horizon, illuminating a spectacular panorama of hundreds and hundreds of miles of lush green forest. He could look down and see the mirrored reflection of his own snowcapped mountain shimmering in the crystal clear river sparkling miles below. Overwhelmed with the beauty of God's creation, he never tired of the exquisite sight. Awestruck at the wonder of God's creation that greeted his eyes each dawn, he watched the sun rise, clapped his hands in glee and shouted at the top of his lungs, "Well done, God, well done!" This was his way of giving thanks to his Creator. This was his sadhana.

SUGGESTIONS: HOW TO DO MORNING SADHANA

PREPARATION

Morning sadhana really starts the night before. It starts with how you go to sleep at night, so you can wake up early in the morning the yogic way. One of the most essential steps in that preparation for morning sadhana is a cold shower. Yes, cold. People pay thousands of dollars for hydrothermal therapy, but you can achieve the same results for only a few cents a day in your own cold shower. I can't repeat often enough how valuable it is to take that cold shower. That's where you can open up your capillaries, increase your circulation, wake up and strengthen your entire nervous system in about five minutes. All you have to do is massage your body vigorously under cold water first thing in the morning until the water doesn't feel cold. After this "tune-up" you're ready to tune-in for your morning sadhana. I'm going to describe in detail the sadhana prescribed by Yogi Bhajan, and practiced by thousands of 3HO students throughout the world. Please join us!

LOCATION

It's best to do sadhana in the same place every day. Ideally, you will find a 3HO Yoga Center or Ashram, and participate in the group sadhana there. Everyone benefits from the combined energy. You can, of course, do your sadhana at home. Just select a clean, quiet spot where you will not be disturbed. You may want to set up an altar of some kind with pictures, flowers, statues, whatever sets a mood of reverence for you. This altar becomes a focal point for your meditative energy.

After you tune in by chanting ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO (at least three times), do a set of Kundalini Yoga exercises (remember to include the relaxations), then you're ready to begin chanting.

MORNING MANTRAS

Sit in Easy Pose, on either wool or cotton padding of some sort. Some people use sheepskins, others prefer a folded blanket. Your foundation should be solid so you can sit still. You can chant sitting in a chair or even lying in bed if your physical condition requires it. Be sure to keep your spine as straight as you can.

The words for all seven of the morning sadhana mantras are at the end of this chapter. The sequence begins with seven minutes of chanting Long Ek Ong Kar's. This mantra opens all the chakras. (See the Things To Do section for specific directions for chanting it.) All of the other mantras for the morning may be chanted to your choice of melodies, with or without musical accompaniment. There are several audio tapes³ available with different musical versions of all the "Aquarian Sadhana" mantras. Try them until you find one that suits you. Or, you can create your own melodies. But be sure to keep the same comparative length of syllables and maintain the same rhythm as they would be spoken if you were simply reciting them in a monotone, without any music. This attention to rhythm preserves the "Naad," which is the inner sound, the power, of the syllables. This is very important. Not every tape that has been produced is flawless in this regard, but as the scriptures say, "Mantram Siddyam, Siddhyam Parameshwaram." He who masters mantra, masters God Himself. Perfection can't be expected to be easily achieved. You will have to be the best judge of which morning sadhana tape works best for you. One of the many advantages to group sadhana is that you can just surrender to the process, as someone else leads the exercises and the chanting. (Or, you can lead it and do it "your way!")

THE AGONY AND THE ECSTASY

I would like to say that morning sadhana will give you a blissful experience. I can't honestly promise you that. The fact is, sometimes it can be downright miserable. It is a cleansing process. Garbage accumulated from many lifetimes gets stirred up and comes floating to the surface. You may find yourself observing some very unpleasant, ugly thoughts while you're meditating or chanting. Garbage consists of such attitudes and feelings as anger, resentment, fear, frustration, self-pity, depression, insecurity. The important thing is, keep on chanting! The mantras are doing their job. You're cleaning up and getting rid of the negativity that has been covering up the divine light inside you.

Negative vibrations create blocks of negativity. These blocks pile up forming walls of negativity, walls that separate us from experiencing the God inside us. It is this sense of separation that makes us unhappy. By continuing to chant, you're replacing negative vibrations with positive ones, and the walls come tumbling down!

If we don't clean up the subconscious on a regular basis, negativity continues to accumulate. When it reaches a saturation point, it spills over into the unconscious mind and then it's really hard to get rid of it.

To be truly liberated and in control of our minds and our lives, we can't be pushed and pulled around by irrational compulsions from the sub-conscious.

Praying is talking to God, meditating is letting God talk to you.

Did you ever do something you really didn't want to do? Or do something you now wish you hadn't done? Well, the desires and the compulsions to action or lack of action, caused by fear, come mostly from the sub-conscious. If we don't get rid of what's buried there, we can be in real trouble!

When you finish chanting for an hour—and even during that hour—remember to give thanks to your Creator. This is an excellent time to pray.

You have worked on your physical body with Kundalini Yoga exercises. You have worked on your mind, cleaning out the sub-conscious through chanting mantras, now it's time to refresh your spirit and integrate all parts of your being by offering yourself and dedicating your actions for the day to the One Creator who makes it possible for you to experience His marvelous creation. It's time for worship, however you choose.

It can be at your own altar, at your temple, church, or synagogue. We who are Sikhs go to the Gurdwara (literally, the "gate of the Guru") which is our temple. "Sikh" simply means student.

Everyone is welcome in any Sikh place of worship. People of all beliefs, castes, colors, genders, and ages are welcome.

We bow when we first enter the Gurdwara. This is not only good for the circulation, but it allows us to express our intention to offer our lives in service to God and acknowledge that we

"God respects me when I work, but He loves me when I sing."

—Sufi Saying

belong to the Guru. We remind ourselves to "give our heads" to the Guru, offering our problems and worries to the Guru. Then we sing, offer a traditional prayer, listen to an excerpt from the Siri Guru Granth Sahib, to give us inspiration and guidance for the day. The Siri Guru Granth Sahib is a volume of sacred writings compiled from the words of Sikh Gurus as well as enlightened Hindu, Muslim, and Sufi saints all of whom experienced the highest state of Yoga. These words are, in effect, Words of God, and by reciting them and listening to them, we raise our consciousness. It is the Living Guru of the Sikhs. We then share some Gurprashad, a traditional sweet, made of whole wheat flour, honey, and clarified butter (literally: a "gift" of the Guru). Tasting this sweet mixture reminds us that everything we receive is sweet because everything comes from God. Then, as Sikhs, we are supposed to "go to work and earn righteously" so that we can have abundance to share with others.

The first Sikh Guru was Guru Nanak, who taught that God lives and breathes in everyone (sound familiar?) and that people should not fight about how to worship that One God. Therefore, Sikhs do not try to convert others to become Sikhs, and are committed to respecting—and even defending—the rights of others to worship however they choose.

HAVE A GOOD DAY

Having done sadhana, you have cleared your mind and consciously prepared yourself to go forth and be successful in handling whatever the day may bring. You consciously strive to hold on to the remembrance and the awareness of SAT NAM with every breath. Wherever you go, whatever you do, remember SAT NAM lives and breathes in you! (Remember in the chapter on Breath of Life we said, "catch yourself breathing!")

SADHANA

*Kundalini Yoga, meditation, and prayer
"Morning Sadhana," your soul wants to be there.
Be kind to your soul in the ambrosial hours
Get rid of impediments and experience your power.
You're already divine, a Spirit Being of Light Clear away the debris so you can shine bright!*

*My mind can be a wonderful friend, and I truly love it dearly
But it doesn't always help me out, when I really need to think clearly.
Bombarded all day with sounds and sights
Cluttered with fantasies and dreams by night*

*Subconscious is constantly programmed subliminally
And the stuff we accumulate loads us down criminally
"Garbage in: garbage out," computer programmer knows
Subconscious garbage causes most of our woes*

*To clean it out, erase those files
It only takes a little while
Do sadhana each morning to get a fresh start
Raise your consciousness and open your heart*

*Series of mantras, one hour of chanting
Re-record on the disc of the mind
Sharpen your wits and hone your skills
These are just a few of the benefits you'll find*

Sacred vibrations in scientific combination Stimulate hypothalamus, change brain cells' permutation

*Chant God's Name before break of day
Sorrow and tension melt away
The process of cleansing I must admit,
Brings negativity to the surface - that's part of it
But unless it's removed, brought out to the light
It festers and multiplies — and that's not right!*

*Excess subconscious garbage not removed, overflows
Into your unconscious, that dark, murky, bottomless pit below.
Clean your mental house daily
It really is a must Even if it does kick up a lot of dust*

*Any fool can sleep late and miss sun's first rays
But blessed be the soul who wakes to the day!
Two and a half hours before the sun rises
Best time for sadhana—practiced by the wisest.*

SPIRITUAL BANK ACCOUNT

Morning sadhana is the best investment in the world. It is like putting money in your spiritual bank account. It will always earn at least ten percent interest. For every hour of morning sadhana, you get ten hours of guidance and clarity! Therefore, the ideal sadhana lasts two and a half hours.

You can be sure when you're doing sadhana in the ambrosial hours that you're in the right place at the right time doing the right thing. What a great feeling of self-esteem and self-assurance, to start each day with that confidence! If you really want to "HAVE A GOOD DAY," sadhana is the way to begin it.

17

Woman is Spelled Double-You-O-Man

This chapter is written primarily for women,
but I think men will find it worth reading.
Shocking perhaps, but worth reading!

Our premise in this book is that everyone has the right to be healthy, happy, and holy. As women, there is a lot we can do to make this possible. Obviously something has to change. Any change starts with a change of attitude, a different idea, or concept. So I invite you to open your mind to a different way of viewing our lives, identity, and purpose as women. You may find some of the things you are about to read upsetting, but twenty-seven years of living, counseling, and observing the results of these ideas have convinced me of their practicality!

Yogi Bhajan pulls no punches. He strips away fantasy and teaches reality. This is not always a popular thing to do. He offers enlightened and universal knowledge of the true nature and characteristics of each gender. He has gone into great detail in hundreds of lectures and classes, explaining how men and women are different. Men may be "from Mars" and women may be "from Venus," but we're all here on Earth now, and we need to learn how to enjoy being here together.

It's obvious that the current belief system of the "equality" of men and women has not brought us happiness and fulfillment. Discontent, depression, and frustration are common. The divorce rate continues to grow and the fabric of society is torn by bitterness and resentment on both sides of the gender line. Though important, equal pay for equal jobs does not deal with the fundamental issue of our unique strengths and purpose as women and our impact on society.

"I believe that so long as those born of woman do not respect woman, there shall be no peace on Earth." —Yogi Bhajan

Adi Shakti Symbol

"You must win freedom and your right to be recognized as human. You cannot be paid less than a man, you can not be denied opportunities because you happen to be a woman. I am not asking you to become total tomboys, but I am telling you that the grace of woman demands to be treated nicely. She is the better half. If somebody opens the door for her it is no tragedy. It is a male courtesy to his own grace...I am not asking you to become feminists, but to be very graceful, absolute women."¹

EVERY WOMAN IS A SHAKTI: GOD'S POWER IN MANIFESTATION

Probably the most striking thing about Yogi Bhajan's attitude toward women is the place of respect and reverence he says is our God given right, and his insistence upon the nobility and invincibility of woman when she claims her rightful power and majesty as "Shakti."

The word Shakti means the feminine aspect of God, the Power through which "He" created the creation. Adi Shakti is the Primal Power.

THE POWER OF WOMEN

Men may not like to believe this, but women are actually sixteen times more powerful than men. Perhaps not in muscular strength, but a woman has sixteen times the emotional impact, sixteen times the intuitive awareness, and sixteen times the protective sense. She's the creature who endures childbirth. She's the one capable of turning her blood to milk to feed her child.

"God has given you sixteen times more courage and more comprehensive biological physical strength than a man. Have pity on this guy! He doesn't have all your biochemical action, doesn't have the mental lunar reflection, doesn't have the sophistication and softness and doesn't have the nervous system to deal with it, and he's still alive!"²

Is it any wonder that a woman's influence and effect on a man can be enormous? Women throughout the ages have inspired men to greatness, or led them to their doom. What we say to a man can either elevate, inspire, and encourage him, or emasculate, antagonize, and sometimes destroy him. But, what about the exploitation of women? Yes, it is true, woman has been put-down, misused, abused, and brutally mistreated. But, this does not have to continue. When we acknowledge and accept our power as women, we can claim our rightful status of dignity, grace, and respect in society.

History shows that any society or civilization in which woman is not respected has ultimately been destroyed.

FROM A CHICK TO AN EAGLE: THE INVINCIBLE WOMAN

Recognizing the need to educate women about women, Yogi Bajan created a special summer intensive training program for women. The first Khalsa Women's Training Camp, KWTC, (Khalsa means "pure one") was held in 1976, on land bought by Yogi Bajan in Espanola, New Mexico. Camp ran for eight weeks, and the women ran, too! Everything from martial arts and marching, to music and meditation was taught. Yogi Bajan personally lectured and led Kundalini Yoga classes every day. He was determined to elevate and transform woman in this country from a "chick" to an eagle! He emphasized the nobility of woman.

He taught special meditations for women, shared ancient secrets on health and diet for women. He lectured on virtually every aspect of a woman's life including love, romance (versus reality), marriage, and childraising, always building our self-esteem and reminding us of the divine nature of Woman. He told us, "You are the Grace of God."

Espanola still hosts KWTC each summer for several weeks, and women can even come for just a weekend of rejuvenation, inspiration, and education.

WHAT DOES A MAN KNOW ABOUT WOMEN?

Sometimes newcomers to camp wonder how a man can know so much about women.

For one thing, during his childhood in India, young Harbhajan Singh Puri had the unique experience of attending an all girls Catholic school. It was the only school available in the area where his family lived. So, Yogi Bhajan learned early in life to deal with many women. He tells stories of the hard time he gave the nuns with his constant questions: unnerving and to the point!

Yogi Bhajan's mother was a very powerful, righteous woman whose training had an impact on him which he has never forgotten. He cherishes her memory to this very day. He has never forgotten the values she taught him. But his understanding of women goes far beyond any male perspective.

As a Master, as a Yogi, Yogi Bhajan always sees women—and men—from a cosmic viewpoint. He never forgets that we are primarily souls, paying our karma and learning our lessons in these two different forms.

SUN and MOON

Cosmically speaking, the male carries the energy and the radiance of the sun, the female represents the moon, the lunar energy. She waxes and wanes. He does not. The sun is stationary, shining, and warm in spite of the clouds. The moon is bright, beautiful, and reflecting. Take these two elements and you can understand the character of man and woman. She shines her brightest reflecting the light of the sun. Reflect your man and you've got him. And if he's warm and shining, firm, stationary and stable, he wins her heart. Does that mean woman does not have her own identity? No, simply they are different. Without the moon to nourish and sustain, whatever grows from the solar energy will not last. Male and female are meant to complement and supplement each other. He is the seeder, she is the nourisher and sustainer. She is meant to contain the male, just as the word female contains the male, and the word woman contains man! W-O-M-A-N is spelled Double-You-Oh-Man!

Expecting men to react, feel and think the same way we women do, is just setting ourselves up for disappointment. We feel hurt when men don't live up to our unrealistic expectations. We get angry at them for being men, for a thousand things that men do or don't do, simply because they're men. When we react emotionally, remember we have sixteen times the impact, so when we blow up at them, or break into tears, men really don't want to, or can't, deal with it. This is frustrating for them, so they can get angry, and then we have a real fight on our hands.

But, you may be thinking, "Hold on a minute, does that mean it is the responsibility of the woman to adapt and adjust all the time? What about men doing their share?" Good point. However, think of it this way: Just as a computer can only print out what has been programmed in, men and women have been programmed to approach life differently. We each came from the Manufacturer with a special software package uniquely designed. It's nobody's fault! If you want to complain, talk to God, He's the Master Computer who designed us the way we are.

Woman is the embodiment of God's creative power. The word Shakti means "God's power in manifestation." Woman embodies the feminine aspect of God, through which "He" created the creation. That Primal Power is called the Adi Shakti and has been worshipped for centuries in the orient in the form of goddesses. Every woman has that divine goddess power in her own being, waiting to be recognized. Kundalini power is Shakti power.

Saraswati, Goddess of Wisdom.
Mother of Eloquence. Mosaic by
Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa, 1967.

EVERY WOMAN IS A GODDESS.

This is worth repeating:

EVERY WOMAN IS A GODDESS!

Yogi Bhajan's respect for women and his teachings are a reflection of Guru Nanak's words³:

*"In a woman, we are conceived, and from a woman we are born
With a woman man is betrothed and married.*

*With a woman, man enjoys friendship and through a woman,
the path of life is created.*

With a woman, man is engaged and married.

When woman has passed away, man seeks another woman.

To the woman, man is bound.

Why call that one bad from whom kings are born.

From a woman, a woman is born. Without a woman there can be none.

Nanak, only the one True Lord is without a woman..."

ACTION PLAN FOR WOMEN

(The following material is quoted directly from Yogi Bhajan's lectures.)

BE CALM, CONTENT, AND CONTAINED

"Never share your weaknesses with your man or your child. Go inside to your navel point, concentrate on it, and you'll get your answer in seconds. The only thing that can make you a failure in life is anxiety. Anxiety comes from the fact that your sense of achievement and sense of timing conflict. Learn to listen to others calmly and yourself quietly. The moment you don't listen to yourself, you will naturally become anxious. If you don't develop your personality so your presence will work, your words won't work either. Your presence should convince a person that he is talking to a goddess.

DISPOSABLE

"Life leaves very deep imprints on a woman. A lot of men try to use women as a toothpaste tube. They want her to be available when they want her, and when they are tired of her they replace her with a new one. A woman should understand her security before she indulges in relationships with men because all temporary relationships are very deeply imprinted on women. Men don't have that faculty, they are not affected the same way.

THE FLIRTATIOUS MIND

"There is a saying: 'There is a value for an arrogant mind but none for a flirtatious mind.' An arrogant mind is stubborn and demands information, whereas a flirtatious mind is self-destructive. A mind which will

"A woman in America has only two choices: be a Goddess or be a prostitute." — Yogi BhaJan destroy the self will destroy everything with it. A flirtatious mind is the worst thing which can happen to a woman. Unfortunately, because of her added mental faculty it is sometimes very easy for her to become flirtatious, as she does not know how to monitor herself. Once a woman has an aura of flirtatious behavior about her, it is very difficult for her to regain her respectability."

GGM: Grace of God Meditation

On September 22, 1970, a group of women Kundalini Yoga students in San Francisco asked Yogi BhaJan how to control and channel their powerful, sometimes overwhelming emotions. They recognized that women do, indeed, have a lot to deal with! This was the day the GGM was born. For the first time, he taught the special meditation that is designed to awaken the power of the Adi Shakti, the goddess, within each woman. He called it the "Grace of God Meditation," "GGM" for short. You'll find it in the section called Take Care of Yourself as a Woman at the end of this book.

Women were not created to compete with men. Women were not intended to battle with men, but rather men and women were meant to complement and supplement each other.

What? No more battle of the sexes? Yes, the battle of the sexes can end. And it can end with a win/win situation, when we as women acknowledge and appreciate our power as women and use it positively.

MEN'S COURSES. Of Course!

For several years Yogi BhaJan taught courses especially for men, and even put some Men's Courses on video-tape. The Men's Courses were only for one day, whereas Women's Camp lasts several weeks each summer. He explained that women are far more complex than men, and in the long run, men would benefit more by his spending more time teaching the women how to be successful wives and mothers.

YOGI BHAJAN'S ADVICE TO MEN

"Whenever a woman cannot talk to you, raises her voice, or argues, she is covering her guilt. It has nothing to do with you. Her subconscious personality is reminding her of previous weaknesses which she doesn't want to fall into again. You are just a scapegoat. By faculty, she's not supposed to act that way. She is not talking to you, she is talking to her subconscious personality; she is in the past. Offer her a drink of water and change the subject."

WOMAN AS HER OWN PSYCHIATRIST

"The mental faculty of a female is multiple. Whereas a man can become 'singular,' this is impossible for a woman. By nature she is meant to protect a second life, that of her child. Nature has given her a subconscious, intuitive personality. Women have their outward personality and also this supplementary personality. But unfortunately the second personality, which is the added personality, creates a split personality.

"Something which was given to her as a gift to facilitate her motherhood, is becoming a psychiatric problem...The whole Western psychological and psychiatric world is totally baffled. They counsel woman without understanding that woman basically has no need to be counseled. She has to be awakened. No woman needs any advice and counseling. Woman can monitor herself, whereas man cannot."

HOW TO ANNOY A WOMAN

"You must understand that woman is much sharper than a male. No woman needs counseling. Her nature is to resist advice. If you want to annoy a woman, counsel her. She also gets angry more quickly than a man. A creature which can turn its blood into milk to save and nourish its offspring can do everything else also. A child can make a man crazy in ten minutes and not disturb a woman in twenty hours. The faculty of a woman also extends to mental and spiritual realms. She has an inborn capacity to tackle everything. She lives in the center of her being. Whereas by nature man either lives in his testicles or in his head. He does not have the natural tendency to live in the center of his being. But woman always lives in the center and works both up and down. There is a saying in the Kama Shashtra, "When a woman is in bed, and sexual intercourse is perfect, and she is totally blended with the man, even at that time she can think that the tea may boil over."

"Never underestimate the power of a woman."

— "Ladies Home Journal" Magazine Slogan

MARRIAGE

"MARRIAGE IS A CARRIAGE UNTO INFINITY"⁴

The divorce rate in America is astronomical, but if a woman understands the real purpose of marriage (instead of the fantasy about it) she has the ability to create a happy and successful relationship and a cozy home that a man will love to never leave. (Not that divorce is necessarily always the fault of the woman, but as they say, "Never underestimate the power of a woman.")

According to the highest spiritual understanding, marriage is a merger, an amalgamation of two souls out of which a new alloy is formed. When there are two bodies with one soul, it's a marriage. Wow! Talk about commitment!

A lot of books have been written about male female relationships and marriage, but Yogi Bhanjan's teachings on the subject are startlingly different. They require a major re-evaluation of preconceived ideas. It's worth the effort, though. Women who have put these concepts into practice, have been helped to make dramatic changes in their lives.

"You all have to realize what a marriage is. Marriage is not an easy path. Marriage is a life. Marriage is not a ceremony, marriage is God.

"Marriage has not been understood by the Western world at all. It was understood by the Eastern world but it is forgotten there too. So at this time, the institution of marriage is in total limbo. People do not know what to do with it; people do not know what to do without it. So what we have found out via the media is that marriage then divorce, and divorce then marriage, is a continuous process. But actually if we all understand what marriage is, then perhaps we can do better:

"Marriage is a partnership of two beings of light who live by their intuition, understanding, and a common, genuine interest of well being.

You are a help to each other. The purpose of the relationship is to relay the help. Relation-ship: relay the ship. Deliver, deliver, deliver, deliver. It comes exactly to that..."

—Yogi Bhajan, KWTC June 29, 1988

"Marriage is an institution of willingness, in which two identities want to amalgamate. It's an amalgamation of two egos to bring out a neutral new personality.

"What is the advantage of it and what is the disadvantage of it? When this amalgamation happens then divine power in the psyche starts to function. Without that, people are individuals and they will only yell and scream at each other and goodness will never come in that home. It is a granted fact.

"Marriage brings happiness. It's an amalgamation of two psyches. And when these two psyches are amalgamated, neither one is an individual. There is no question of 'he' and 'she.'

"To make an alloy, you take two elements and put them together. The alloy cannot be separated. You can boil it, you can form the alloy into a liquid, you can totally burn it, but once it becomes an alloy, it will totally keep its own quality, own quantity, own weight, own molecules, own electrons, protons, and neutrons, and own combination. Whatever made brass doesn't matter. Brass has its own faculty, own quality, own weight, and own property. And that is what love is, that is what marriage is, that is what life is, that is what good luck is, when a male and a female merge together. That is why we marry before God."

As Yogi Bhajan says, "Everybody has faults. You divorce a man with 26 faults, but then you marry a man with a set of 27 other faults. What's the point? Broken hearts, broken homes. God lives in cozy homes, not in crazy homes." And it is the woman who creates the home, and it is the woman who becomes mother, the first teacher of our future generations.

TAKE IT LIGHTLY?

Today many people take marriage lightly, “Oh, if it doesn’t work out, we’ll get a divorce.” And even having children is a pathetically casual affair. As Yogi Bhanjan put it, “You take more care in preparing to plant a rose bush than you do to conceive a child.” It is essential to understand that parents, and particularly the mother, play a most significant role in the shaping of the lifelong character, values, and attitudes of every generation. More about this in the Four Teachers Chapter.

MOTHER’S 120th DAY

There is a beautiful custom of honoring a mother-to-be on the occasion of her 120th day of pregnancy. That is the day on which the soul actually enters the womb. Until the 120th day, according to ancient wisdom, there is really no “life” in the womb, only a piece of flesh, until the soul enters.

From the 120th day onward, the baby is receiving and absorbing input via the mother. What the mother hears, the baby hears; how the mother feels, the baby feels. What the mother says and does makes a distinct imprint on the child.

CHILD STAR

In her autobiography, Child Star, Shirley Temple Black, who was the most famous child motion picture star of all time, writes that her mother purposely went to museums, listened to beautiful music, read poetry, and even danced and sang while she was carrying Shirley, so that she would be sure to give birth to a talented, musically gifted child. In the *Mahabharata*⁵ it speaks of the future warrior Arjuna being able to plan a successful battle strategy while still a young boy, because he remembered a conversation his father had with his mother while Arjuna was in her womb!

In 3HO, we have a big party to celebrate the mother’s 120th Day. But it’s not a baby shower. People bring gifts—but they’re not for the baby, they are for the woman who is bringing a new life into the world. We honor her especially on this day, for she is the vehicle through which the the world receives a child who shall become a “saint, a hero, or a giver.” That is the mother’s assignment, to give the child spiritual values, so he can become that. And, all the time she must remember that the child does not belong to her, but belongs only to God. A child is no one's property.

PAY THE RENT

Being a parent is a job, and it's a challenging one. Parents are caretakers, teachers, and trainers. Parents are the ones who "pay the rent!" Kahlil Gibran's often quoted poem reminds us that our children don't belong to us. The attachment of parents to children, and its negative effects, is one of the hardest concepts for us to understand and accept - because we usually mistake attachment for love. It isn't. Learning the difference between mother love and "smother love" is one of our hardest lessons as women.

MANIFEST THE GODDESS ONE DAY AT A TIME

At the place where you relate to your Creator in the morning, place a sign that reads, "This Day Will I Be Graceful?" That day you will have to be graceful because you have asked the question and the answer is, "You will!" It should manifest in your way of speaking, eating, telephoning, behaving, taking a bath, dressing, driving a car, and so on. Your every action during that day must represent you as graceful. The most beautiful thing about it is that if you can do that for forty days, you will have achieved a state of mind in which little by little you can become totally perfect.

"One thing every woman should know:
SHOW NO INSECURITY.
This is a key to royalty."

—Yogi BhaJan

POWER OF A WOMAN

Guided Meditation for Women

"...See your power as a woman. Touch the heavens, squeeze it to yourself. Make all the oceans into just a drop. And out of this drop, you must squeeze all the stars and suns and moon. Beyond that, there is a space where you must excel. The gods shall listen to the call of the woman.

"The sound in the heavens, the murmur of the leaves; the music of the breeze; and the sound of the waves; the clouds in the skies and the dust on the earth - all in salutation to the call of the woman. The angels, divines, the sages, the saints are the existence of the very prayer of the woman. The calling of the woman can penetrate through heavens and beyond all spaces into the infinity of God, and that's the only one power pure enough to manifest God on Earth..."

"...This is the truth. And you have to experience it. Woman is the only force. Living, vital, vibrating, her verbal sense is the only sense which is creative, which is consciousness..."

"...My dear children of God, there is a job to do. Put on your armor, alert yourself, and get going. The heavens shall bow to you. The angels will come. The demigods shall obey, and the Almighty God shall listen to you. Because you are the only way..."⁶

18

Four Teachers

Things Your Mother Never Told You

Unfortunately, most parents, including yours and mine, have to depend upon their instincts and the patterns they learned from their parents.

Most of them are not yogis. They can only guide us within the limits of their own knowledge and experience. Even with the best of intentions, their own neuroses and biases color the way they teach us to deal with ourselves and the world.

It is not only what parents say to us, but what they do and what they are that deeply affects us and forms our basic attitudes toward ourselves and everyone else. We in turn pass along this legacy to our children, consciously or unconsciously.

Your first teacher in this school of life is your mother, second is your father, third is the environment (relatives, school teachers, friends), and finally, the fourth is your Spiritual Teacher whose job it is to correct any misconceptions you received from the first three.

MOTHER

Your first teacher is your mother. From the 120th day following conception (it is on the 120th day that the soul actually enters the womb) through the first three years of life, your mother's influence dominates. She is the primary, powerful, most compelling shaper of the attitudes, habits, prejudices, relationships, and self-images that usually stay with you for the rest of your life. For better or for worse, your mother's influence is almost indelible. The umbilical cord lasts well beyond the womb. The seeds of growing up with fear of failure, or fear of success, are planted during these early years.

FATHER

Your second teacher is your father. From age three to eight, his impact predominates. He is the male figure (or absence thereof) who supplies the example, the role model for a son. Dad is the archetype to imitate, to love, or to hate. Father personifies "man." For a daughter, Daddy or Poppa is the standard to which she will compare every other man she ever meets, for better or for worse.

RELATIVES and FRIENDS

The third teacher enters our consciousness at about age eight, in the form of brothers and sisters, relatives, neighbors, teachers, friends. They take on a major role of influence in our lives. Peer pressure rears its ugly head, and continues to grow stronger until it becomes enormous during the teen-age years. Of course, given ideal circumstances, peer pressure can be useful, supportive, and can encourage positive growth, but in most instances, it has the opposite effect.

SPIRITUAL TEACHER

The fourth teacher is your spiritual teacher. Most people born in the West don't really know what a "spiritual teacher" is. We suffer from a collective cultural deficiency, i.e., lack of education about the nature and function of a spiritual teacher and the necessity and importance of this relationship in our lives.

Who does he think he is? It's not a matter of "thinking," a genuine spiritual teacher KNOWS who he is. He has had the actual experience of confirming his identity beyond question. His mission in life is to help other people achieve that same experience. And when your soul leaves the body, he's there to help you make the transition. He works more in the non-physical planes than on the physical.

When you go mountain climbing, you hire a guide — someone who knows the way and the technology to get you to the top without falling and breaking your neck. He tells you where to step. You have the choice of following his instructions or not. You have that same choice on your spiritual path. Your spiritual teacher is like the rope with the hook on one end that you can safely climb up on, because it's anchored on the top. He offers himself as that rope. You have to project a link to it from your heart and then hold on! He takes on the weight of you and your karma as well as that of all the others he is helping to reach the same destination. That link is never broken by the teacher, but the student has the option to let go at anytime, and many do. It is that link of the mind and heart which we create with our teacher that enables him to help us free ourselves from our past, from our pain, from our patterns of fear, jealousy, greed, and anger, which cause us so much suffering and keep us trapped in our lower consciousness. Yogi Bhajan is my spiritual teacher.

Spirituality cannot be taught, it has to be caught, you have to get it from someone who's got it. That's why the inner connection with a spiritual teacher is so important.

Yogi Bhajan describes the student-teacher relationship:

Like a hammer and a chisel with a stone:
when they meet, the sparks fly.

The relationship of a student to a spiritual teacher has to be described in analogies, because it is fundamentally so different from any other relationship you have. The relationship is not between personalities, although to the student it can appear to be!

A spiritual teacher is like a forklift who has to come down to earth, pick you up and lift you to the heights of his level of consciousness. When he meets you, how you perceive him depends upon your degree of consciousness. He can play whatever role you need in order for you to evolve.

TIME IS A TEACHER, TOO

Life is a school. We can choose: We can either learn our lessons in the hands of Time or from a Teacher. Our spiritual teacher acts as a catalyst to accelerate the learning process. He saves us time (perhaps even lifetimes). He doesn't necessarily make life easier, but he makes our growth as a spiritual being the main focus. He challenges us to fulfill our highest potential. He doesn't, and isn't supposed to, solve our problems for us, because that is OUR job. He gives us the tools and teaches us how to use them to cope with all the things we must face. He can suggest and recommend, but he cannot make our choices for us.

In this Aquarian Age, it is no longer adequate to know about something, we have to experience it. A spiritual teacher is not a preacher. Lots of people can give fabulous lectures and quote plenty of scripture. A spiritual teacher gives you an experience.

19 My Spiritual Teacher

YOGI BHAJAN

Siri Singh Sahib Bhai Sahib
Harbhajan Singh Khalsa Yogiji
also known as Yogi Bhaan

I thought I “knew it all” and I was not looking for a spiritual teacher when I met Yogi Bhaan. I was almost forty years old. I had been to India and had already studied with many other teachers. Some of what I had learned was wonderful and some of it was not. However, it was all valuable for it led me to the time and place where I could become Yogi Bhaan’s student. Sooner or later, everyone gets one opportunity to meet their spiritual teacher. Not everyone recognizes nor accepts him. I almost missed my chance.

The day I met Yogi Bhaan, I privately told the woman who introduced us that I did not trust him. What I didn’t know was that a real spiritual teacher is a mirror to our own consciousness. Come at him with your ego in full sail and you’ll get zapped by the reflection of yourself right back at you - in no uncertain terms! Having been badly betrayed in the past by someone I had mistakenly regarded as a spiritual teacher, I was full of skepticism. (And pretty full of myself!) Fortunately, I was strongly impressed by the depth of love and light I saw in the eyes of this courtly mannered, soft spoken yogi.

A true spiritual teacher has already experienced the state of “yoga,” or divine union with his own infinity. He recognizes that same, divine identity in every other human being. Therefore, he truly loves and accepts everyone. These authentic spiritual teachers, “masters,” “saints,” yogis, come to wake us up to reality. They usually shake us up in the process. They challenge us, they teach us, and they pray for us. Their mission is to enable us to experience our true identity as divine beings in human form. They are often crucified for this attempt.

You are not a human being having a spiritual experience; you are a spiritual being having a human experience.

It was December 22, 1968, at a lecture at the East West Cultural Center that I first met Yogi Bhanan. After the program, a small group of us went out to dinner together, including "the yogi." I was quite surprised when he suddenly leaned forward from the other end of the table and said, "Your son's in trouble, isn't he? I can help you." I didn't know what to make of this strange tall man, with such a striking appearance. Since my son was indeed in serious trouble, I didn't want to pass up any opportunity for help. So, just a few days later, on Christmas day, I phoned Yogi Bhanan and went to see him. He not only told me the story of his life, he also told me the story of my life!

The ability to see into a person's innermost being, to know what that soul has experienced, as well as to see its destiny, is one of the major attributes of a spiritual teacher. Yogi Bhanan's vision is not limited to outer appearances.

This is what he told me: He had been hired to teach Kundalini Yoga at Toronto University, but the day before his plane from New Delhi landed, the head of the department who had hired him was killed in an auto accident. The job was no longer there. To make matters worse, his luggage had been lost en route. Of course he had been warned by the pandits and astrologers in India that he should wait until a more auspicious time to make the trip. They had told him he would have a very hard time in the West unless he postponed his departure. But as we have learned through the years, it is not in Yogi Bhanan's nature to retreat from difficulty. He confronts challenge head on. He listens to everyone's advice, but he always acts according to his own inner guidance.

In Canada, he was really a stranger in a strange land, dealing with a very different culture. The cold Canadian winter had just set in. He had to tie newspapers around his shoes to keep warm. He didn't know where his next meal was coming from. Sometimes it didn't come. Then he got a job working as a shipping clerk in a book store. When he was invited to come to Los Angeles for a weekend, he gladly accepted. That's when I met him. After our conversation on December 25th, I offered to drive him to an appointment the next day. That is when he gave me the mantra that changed my life.

He explained to me that nothing in this world is more powerful than the prayer of a mother for her son. He wrote down the words EK ONG KAR SAT NAM SIRI WHA GURU on a little piece of paper. He told me that if I would chant this mantra powerfully from the navel point, all in one breath, for one hour every day before sunrise and pray for my son, he would be all right. (At the time I didn't even know where my son was, only that he had attempted suicide and gone A.W.O.L. from the United States Army.)

I already had a spiritual routine I was doing daily, including several other mantras. When Yogi Bhajan gave me this one, I asked him, "What about all the other things I'm doing?" (Sufi chanting, Hopi Indian mantra, and Vedanta meditation.) He said, "Go ahead and do everything, but try this also."

That seemed reasonable to me, so that's what I did. On the second day of chanting, I had such a profound experience that I could barely wait until I could phone him and say, "I don't have to do anything else, this is it." Now, twenty-seven years later, although we chant many other mantras that Yogi Bhajan has taught us, those syllables are still "mine."

(I am happy to say that within ten days I heard from my son. He had been "rescued" up in Berkeley, which is a whole story in itself, with no space in this book for it! We were able to work things out with the army. I'm also happy to say that I saved the precious piece of paper on which Yogi Bhajan wrote those eight magic words. It's carefully preserved in my scrapbook of the early days of 3HO.)

Yogi Bhajan had told me during my first interview with him, "You have been a student long enough, you should be a teacher." He said that he had come to train teachers, not to get disciples. At the time I thought to myself, "Oh, sure, fat chance." He said although I knew a lot, he could "put it all together for me." I thought, "Who does he think he is?"

I found out! He is an amazing living phenomenon of perpetual creativity. When he lectures, a spontaneous flow of divine inspiration comes through him. Put him in any situation, he will always attune himself to the needs of that particular group of people, time, and place. Yogi Bhajan is the pipeline, the "post-man" delivering the divine message that each of us is a soul, our identity is Truth (SAT NAM) and we're here to experience That. He tells us that it is foolish and a mistake to worship the messenger, but I have observed it is equally foolish to ignore the message!

Where Yogi Bhajan is concerned, throw out your preconceived ideas of what a spiritual teacher is. Part of the job he does so masterfully is to confuse your intellect so that you have to go beyond your mind. God cannot be experienced so long as our perception is limited within the confines of the intellect.

Because he is a Teacher, Yogi Bhajan gives tests constantly. He often uses the "poke, provoke, confront, and elevate" technique. He pushes us to break out of the confinement of our limited little egos. This does not necessarily make him popular. In fact we (our egos, that is) can definitely resent what he says. Truth about ourselves is often hard to swallow, much less digest.

I've never met anyone so adept at "pushing my buttons" as Yogi Bhajan. But, alas, I know that so long as I have buttons that can be pushed, I'm still living in my ego and reacting, and that blocks my own spiritual growth.

Sometimes the test is simply to recognize that what he says, or the situation we are in, is a test! Test of what? Those qualities we need to learn in order to graduate from this earth school-of-life: non-attachment, patience, faith, kindness, obedience, surrender to the will of God, humility.

Each of us is different, each of us has a unique curriculum to master. Therefore, the spiritual teacher provides a specialized tutorial for every individual under his direct guidance, plus he has to provide universal guidelines and principles that apply to everyone. Yogi Bhajan's teachings are based on such universal Truths.

To many people in the '60s and '70s Yogiji became the father figure. Lovingly, patiently, humorously, he cajoled, encouraged, helped, and inspired a whole generation to try Kundalini Yoga instead of drugs. He never said, "No," or “Don’t” do this or that, he gave alternatives. He taught three classes, six days a week, and a meditation class on Sundays for over a year.

Meanwhile, he was studying our culture, our attitudes, our personal histories of abuse and neglect, betrayal, and abandonment. Out of his compassion he began to create more opportunities for us to heal and strengthen ourselves. He created 3HO events such as Summer and Winter Solstice Sadhanas, and Khalsa Women’s Training Camp (KWTC). In 1970, when he became the Mahan Tantric, he put himself on the line even more, taking on more stress by allowing anyone and everyone to participate in the White Tantric Yoga group meditation courses he taught. (See the chapter Tantric Yoga.)

Through the years he has given us many insights into his personal philosophy of life. Here’s one such gem:

FIVE CORNERSTONES OF YOGI BHAJAN’S STRENGTH

1. Never let out that which can harm anyone.
2. Never let in what can harm you.
3. Never let down friend or foe.
4. Light up that corner where no one has the courage.
5. Keep up and keep the harmony.

Perhaps you have never met Yogi Bhajan. But I assure you, if you are practicing Kundalini Yoga, and certainly if you are teaching it, it is his mastery that supports your spiritual growth. He and all the spiritual teachers who have preceded him, are called into service whenever you chant ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO. It is not the people, but their spiritual consciousness, their subtle bodies, who are with you, like guardian angels invoked by those syllables.

THE GOLDEN CHAIN

Through the ages, the transference of spiritual awareness, consciousness, and power has been handed down from master to disciple, in a continuous chain whose links are forged of reverence, obedience, devotion, and humility on the part of the student, and infinite love and sacrifice on the part of the teacher. This ongoing connection is sometimes called the “golden chain.”

MAHAN TANTRIC

Yogi Bhajan is unique among spiritual teachers because he is also the Mahan Tantric of this era. This means that he is the only living master of White Tantric Yoga in the world, since there can only be one on the planet at any given time. He is a world teacher, a very special instrument whom God has appointed and anointed to awaken the millions of sleeping souls on this planet.

He is a Teacher of teachers. His words have enormous power. His being vibrates in harmony with the universal consciousness and he feels everything before it happens. He cannot compromise the integrity of his responsibility as a teacher, so he cannot tell all that he knows. His power is not his own, and he knows it. He says his power is his own inner prayer, which is calm, quiet, and peaceful. (Though outwardly, most students will attest, his energy comes across like a tornado!)

GO CLIMB A TREE?

Yogi Bhajan tells a great story about one of the ways Sant Hazara Singh, his Kundalini Yoga teacher in India (and the Mahan Tantric during those years), tested him. Wearing his best starched clothes and shined shoes, he was traveling with his teacher to meet some dignitary. Sant Hazara Singh told the driver to stop the car, and instructed young Harbhajan Singh to get out. He pointed to a nearby tree and told him to climb it, and to stay there until he came back. As a good student, the boy didn't ask why, he didn't hesitate. He got out, climbed the tree and waited. His teacher drove off. Three days and nights went by. He stayed up in that tree! When his teacher finally came back and released him, he never asked him how he had managed, never congratulated him on his obedience and resourcefulness. The matter was never discussed. Of course that was in India, where they understand what it means to serve a spiritual teacher, and what can be gained. Yogi Bhajan knew the rules of the relationship: never ask why, never deny, simply say "Yes, Sir," and do it. God only knows what one of us would do under similar circumstances.

A spiritual teacher never settles for anything less than the best from a student. His job is not to praise us when we do well, but to present the next lesson immediately so we can continue to grow. He can never be satisfied.

Yogi Bhajan has told us many stories about his experiences as a student. One of them is about a time when he was a young military officer, already quite an accomplished yogi. However, he wanted to learn a particular kriya from a teacher whom he had never met. Every day he would go to pay his respects, hoping for an audience. The teacher ignored him for months. Then he sent word that he should personally prepare and bring a carrot pudding as an offering every day. He also insisted that Harbhajan walk the five miles to get there. This went on for months before the teacher would even talk to him. The young military officer, in his immaculately starched and pressed uniform had to leave his car and his driver behind, and make the trek barefoot, carrying that carrot pudding. He did it. Would you?

In the West, we have not been taught to respect the cosmic laws which govern the student—teacher relationship. In fact, most people don't even know what they are. So, in our ignorance, we are not able to take full advantage of the benefits and blessings a teacher can offer. It is also true that there has been exploitation and abuse of the role of Spiritual Teacher by people claiming to be "enlightened." Before you get involved with any teacher, you should investigate this area for yourself. Come to your own conclusions. I learned about spiritual teachers through reading and through trial and error during fifteen years of exploring various spiritual paths before I met Yogi Bhajan. One thing I know for sure, watch out for any teacher who wants you to worship him. If you consider someone your spiritual teacher, he deserves your utmost respect and reverence. If he or she is a genuine Teacher, and you want to excel, give your obedience. For those who are destined to lead must first learn to follow. But always remember, the teacher is the guide, not the destination.

TEACHER OF TEACHERS

True to his word, Yogi Bhajan has trained hundreds of teachers of Kundalini Yoga. The 3HO Foundation, (Healthy, Happy, Holy Organization) which he founded in 1969, is a teacher training organization with centers all over the world. He told us:

"If you want to learn something, read about it. If you want to understand something, write about it. If you want to master something, teach it." He wants us all to be masters. He tells us to be "ten times greater" than he is. And he means it.

He also warned all of us who were to become teachers that, "You will be tested in three areas: money, sex, or power—possibly in all of them." It is a great responsibility and privilege to teach Kundalini Yoga. It is said that if a teacher betrays the sacred trust placed in him, he will be reborn as a cockroach!

"Don't serve lineage, serve legacy."
—Yogi Bhajan

YOGI BHAJAN'S POETRY AND ART

The Siri Singh Sahib, Yogi Bhajan has written many, many poems. A special collection has been published in a book called Furmaan Khalsa. Many of his poems have been set to music and are on tape. He has painted pictures, designed jewelry, and gathered together a magnificent collection of statuary, paintings and other art objects all of which he has donated to the Sikh Dharma archives. A museum is planned to house these treasures.

BIOGRAPHY OF A YOGI

Born August 26, 1929, in the village of Kot Harkaran, now in Pakistan, Harbhajan Singh Puri was the son of a medical doctor and a very devout and powerful mother. He mastered Kundalini Yoga when he was sixteen. Still only a teenager when India was partitioned, he took charge of leading a thousand people out of his village to safety near New Delhi. During his youth he studied with many teachers, including his revered grandfather, Bhai Fateh Singh, and the Mahan Tantric, Sant Hazara Singh. He attended Punjab University where he majored in Economics, was an all-around athlete, and a champion debater. I have his prize certificates in my files. Captain of the soccer team, track star, he used his Kundalini Yoga practice to get in shape for athletic events. He was a winner!

He married Inderjit Kaur, and they had three children (and now five grandchildren born in the United States). He was a Commanding Officer in the Indian Army, starting out in the Motor Transport division, and he served in the Indian Government for eighteen years before coming to America.

Harbhajan Singh Khalsa Yogiji became a United States citizen in 1976 and earned his Ph.D. in psychology in 1980. His doctoral dissertation is called "Communication, Liberation or Condemnation."

His bottom line is:

Understand the fact that God is in all, big and small.

His motto is:

If You Can't See God In All,
You Can't See God At All

20 Communication

After years of ministerial counseling I have come to the conclusion that most problems between people are problems in communication. Yes, of course we all have our neuroses, and trust is a major issue, but when two people really communicate with each other, a lot of problems can be solved. Even wars eventually have to go to the negotiating table to finalize peace. Why not start there?

There is a whole science to effective communication so that your words will be received and understood the way you intend them. Yogi Bhanjan's doctoral dissertation titled: "Communication, Liberation or Condemnation," is on this very subject. It goes into great detail about the use of the various chakras (energy centers) in communication.

"Communication is very misunderstood by all human beings

When you are angry,

When you are emotional,

When you are hurt,

When you are insecure,

Or when you are into an ego trip —

That's when you feel you must talk,

And that's why you mess up!

Because when you talk it should be for the future, not for the past or the present. Communication is the art of building heaven in the future."¹

YOGI BHAJAN SPEAKS ABOUT WORDS and CHAKRAS:

"...What should I say? The two most important things in your body are the upper palate, which is the base of the hypothalamus, and the tip of the tongue. Every word spoken by you is made with the palate and the tongue in combination with the hypothalamus, which controls the entire neurons of the brain. The tongue has a central nervous system controlling your total psyche. You can change the whole world with the word. World is dependent on the word. W-O-R-D and W-O-R-L-D. The central nervous system, shushmana, is at the tip of the tongue. And your entire neuron section is up here under the hypothalamus where the stimulation of the eighty-four meridian points takes place. It's decided by the permutation and combination. But there is a chakra involved. Ask me any question, I'll tell you which chakra will answer what.

Q: What is the difference between communicating from the fifth center and the sixth center?

A: With any communication, one center is involved. You have to decide what the purpose is. If the purpose is to mess up somebody, go with the first chakra. If you want to seduce somebody, go with the second. If you want to balance out somebody, go with the third. If you want to uplift somebody, go with the fourth. If you want to be blunt, go by the fifth. If you want to command somebody and take the responsibility and see it is done and delivered, then go by the sixth. If you want to just get rid of somebody, go by the seventh. You know what the seventh is? 'I see the light in you better than me. God bless you, you are wonderful.' The guy will shut up in two minutes."

SPEAKING OF SPEAKING:

Did you ever analyze how much of what you say is encouraging, uplifting, and positive — and how much is not? Much of our ordinary, every day conversation is negative and self-negating. We barely notice the destructive nature of the words we use because the "put-down" is so common in our society.

Start listening to your words. If you really want to have an adventure, tape record yourself for a whole day and then listen to what you have said. You'll be shocked, especially when you remember you are "creating" whenever you speak. The old admonition to “think before you speak” is still good advice. It’s easier to do that when you have your nerves under control. Nerves have to be very strong so you don’t automatically react to everything that happens the minute it happens, like a robot responding to a button being pushed. (I hope you read the chapter called Stress, Stamina, and Nerves of Steel.)

Another fascinating experiment in self-awareness is to go on silence for a few days. It can be quite a revelation. I’ve done it. It was very humbling. If you really do it, you’ll probably discover as I did, how much conversation is not really necessary or useful at all (including your own!).

In the Things To Do section you’ll find two meditations Yogi BhaJan taught specifically to help us improve our communication.

CHOOSE YOUR WORDS

*Words are the colors
On the speaker's palate
Evoking emotion
In the ear of the beholder*

*Some are dull and some are bright
Some are wrong and some are right
Some ennobles and some degrade
One Word created this creation
... So it was said*

*Be Careful
Be Courageous
Be Conscious
Be sure
Before you speak—
Will your words kill — or cure?*

*Words can comfort
Words can enrage
Words can liberate
Or words can cage
Some*

*Words are weapons
Words are bandages
Words are penicillin
Words are poison*

*Words are hot
And words are cold
Words speak Truth —
With words, lies are told*

*Honor your words
Use your words with honor
For words can heal
Or words can kill*

*Aim your words with extra care
Lasers pierce targets everywhere
Relationships built over many years
One false word dissolve in tears*

*Words reveal
And words hide
True Identity
Divine inside*

*Faith in the Word
Dispels all fear
Hold your words gently
Hold your words dear
Be honest, be kind
Make yourself clear*

*To belittle is common
To uplift is rare
Value your words
Use them with care*

*Power to speak comes from breath of life
Surgeon's scalpel or butcher knife
Speak to your soul with respect in place
You'll speak to others with equal grace.*

The Snake That Poisons Everybody³

It
topples governments, wrecks
marriages, ruins careers, busts reputations, causes heartaches, nightmares,
indigestion,
spawns suspicion, generates grief, dispatches innocent people to cry in their pillows.
Even its name
hisses.
It's called gossip.
Office gossip,
Shop gossip,
Party gossip.
It makes headlines and headaches.
Before you repeat a story,
ask yourself:
Is it true?
Is it fair?
Is it necessary?
If not,
shut up.

How we perform as individuals will determine how we perform as a nation.

21

Happiness

Everyone wants to be happy. At least consciously. The problem is in the subconscious. Subconsciously some of us may not be ready to give up our suffering. Some of us are so used to feeling miserable that we don't know who we'd be if we stopped feeling sorry for ourselves!

What would we have to talk about if we quit complaining? Dr. Donald Curtis (Science of Mind minister) used to call it the "P.L.O.M." syndrome. "Poor Little Old Me" is a pretty common self-image in our society. It doesn't lend itself to happiness. Some people's self image is so tied up with feeling victimized, or feeling "unworthy" that they can't even imagine what it would be like to be happy. Yet happiness is the birthright of every human being. The true nature of the soul is joy!

Happiness goes way beyond pleasure or enjoyment. Happiness is an inner state of being. It comes when we are in touch with the permanent part of ourselves, the God within us, that is always in bliss. The essential nature of God is described by Vedanta philosophy as "Sat, Chit, Anand": Truth, Knowledge, and Bliss.

Happiness is NOT dependent upon any outside person, event, or thing.

We are each responsible for our own happiness. It is how I personally choose to relate to a person, event, or thing; the kind of thought, feeling, or emotion that I choose to hold about it, that determines my happiness or unhappiness. I can't blame anyone else for how I feel about my life. If I view what's happening from the telescope of the divine consciousness within me, I'll have a different experience than if I look at it with the microscope of my personal emotions. Happiness is a state of being. Happy or unhappy is how I "am."

"Happiness runs in a circular motion.
Life is like a little boat upon the sea,
Everybody is a part of everything anyway.
You can have it all if you let yourself be..."

—Donovan

Happiness comes from giving, and having an attitude of gratitude. Happiness has to do with being god-like. That's not asking too much, since the core identity of each of us is Spirit. That's why these Seven Steps To Happiness apply:

The Seven Steps to Happiness

The seven steps to happiness are: commitment, character, dignity, divinity, grace, power to sacrifice, experience of happiness. There is no other way you can be happy. Here's how Yogi Bajan elaborated on them at KWTC, 1989.

- 1. COMMITMENT: to kindness and to compassion, it gives you character.
- 2. CHARACTER: is a pattern of behavior where you can clearly answer and stand before your own consciousness, it leads to Dignity.
- 3. DIGNITY: is when you act as a god for another, then you gain Divinity.
- 4. DIVINITY: is when you put yourself and your life on the line to serve another person or a creature, which leads you to Grace.
- 5. GRACE: is when you've developed a presence that works so that you have the Power to Sacrifice.
- 6. POWER TO SACRIFICE: is when God sits in your heart and presides in your head and you can therefore sacrifice—and that takes you to Happiness.
- 7. HAPPINESS: is when you can be thankful for the chance of being these seven things.

22

THE WORLD ACCORDING TO ME. with a little help from Vedanta Philosophy and a few other teachings:

Life is a Movie

In 1943, when I was thirteen, my mother and I moved to the entertainment capital of the world, HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA! It was the Golden Age of film. Everybody went to the movies regularly. I still do. I love to be entertained, don't you? That's why we go to the movies, read books and plays, and watch television. We're fascinated, intrigued, inspired, frightened, or amused by the tales we hear or see. We can experience all sorts of adventures vicariously. The best teachers and public speakers are the ones who are good story tellers. They entertain us. Here's a good story for you:

"Once upon a time, before time began..." according to Vedanta philosophy, God created this entire creation. It is said He did it for His entertainment, so this whole creation is known as God's "Leela," His "play." Everything we see around us is part of His story, unfolding for His entertainment!

I figure that must be why we, His creatures, made by Him, "in His image," enjoy stories (substitute "movies" here) so much. It's because we're "God-like"!

As I understand it, God was just kind of sitting around, not doing much of anything, simply existing as a vast, shoreless ocean of existence, absolutely silent and still. Static. No ripples, no movement, no activity. Just a vast expanse of "being" — a timeless, beginningless, and endless ocean with no surface and no bottom. In other words, unmanifest, infinite, unlimited in any way. Then at one unmeasurable point, God set into motion within Himself, a vibration that created ripples and waves. In other words, God "spoke." With one mighty roar, He created the creation. He made Himself colder in some places, forming icebergs; and hotter in others, forming steam; He laughed and played, watching and experiencing the interaction of Himself with Himself in a tremendous variety of shapes, and forms, and colors all taking place within, and composed of the ocean of His own Being-ness. His story became manifest.

Describing or imagining God as an ocean is, of course, just one of many analogies people have used to try to understand what God is. At least for me, the ocean analogy works. It makes it easier to understand how God can be, and is always, everything and everywhere. I repeat:

God is everything that ever was, is now, or shall ever be.

"Aad Such,

Jugaad Such,

Habhee Such,

Nanak Hosee Bhee Such..."

True in the beginning.

True through all the ages.

True even now.

Nanak¹ says Truth shall exist forever.

RULES OF THE GAME

Let's go back to the analogy of God as an ocean of existence that created a game (out of the "water" of His own being) of shapes and forms that interact with each other. It's the game of life. And God created a whole system of evolution within this game. Just as a child at play builds a sand castle and then knocks it over and builds it up all over and over again, God Generates, Organizes, and then Destroys (or Delivers) everything within His Creation.

He made the planets and the stars, earth, and sky, and oceans (wet ones), rivers, lakes, and trees, and birds, and you, and me. And He made rules for His Game. These are called cosmic laws. They include the law of karma. Karma is automatic. It is based on the principle of action and reaction. The way it works is sometimes described as "As you sow, so shall you reap." We get back what we send out, and that's a fact. However, it may take many lifetimes to get all the results — or reactions — from the actions we have set into motion, until everything gets finally balanced out.

Nobody really ever “gets away with” anything, even though it may seem like it. Karma has to be paid, if not now, later; perhaps in a next lifetime. Sooner or later “what goes around comes around.” However, with the blessing of God and the grace of the Guru, karma can be softened by Dharma (path of righteousness/spiritual path). Your spiritual teacher can also help by taking on some of the karma your soul agreed to pay off in this lifetime. He can counsel you and guide you to make the decisions that will most effectively fulfill your destiny and teach you the lessons you came to this planet to learn. The spiritual teacher can save you lots of time and useless suffering if you're smart enough to listen carefully to him. Another analogy: Life is a school.

SCENE: Schoolroom called Earth

Everyone gets challenges and tests, because Earth is a school, and we have come here to learn the lessons our souls need in order to graduate. (This is part of the script God wrote.)

Either we learn in the hands of Time or from a Spiritual Teacher.

Your soul agreed to be born at a certain time and place (yes, you chose your own parents), with the scenery, cast, and crew chosen to support you in your starring role in your personal story. The folks closest to you are most likely people who have some strong karmic connection to you from the past.

(We're back to the movie analogy:)

This “movie” is God's game of life. It's God's show. God is playing all of the roles. He is actually all of the actors and actresses! He is the author, the screen writer, director, and producer, as well as the scenery and the audience. God is even the ticket-taker, the usher, and the boy who sells the popcorn!

THE SHOW MUST GO ON

When scientists split the atom back in the '40s, the energy that was released was, and still is, the very same energy that the yogis have known about and played with for thousands of years. They call it "prana." It is the incoming life breath. It is prana that God puts into you every time He gives you another breath of life. Each time you inhale it is God breathing the essence of Himself into you so that His show can go on. Maybe that's where the saying, "The show must go on!" originated.

Choose the analogy you like, "ocean, movie, game." In any case, life is happening, and we are acting (or reacting) in its story, playing the roles we were given. The thing is, someday the show will be over and we must go Home. Going "Home" means going back to GOD, from Whom we came in the first place. Winning the game of life means going home consciously. Consciously expanding your self-awareness until you remember, recognize, and experience that you are the whole ocean. "You and God, God and you are ONE." That experience of your own identity is the ultimate goal of practicing yoga. It is the goal of all human existence.

"All things come from God, and all things go to God."²
(There's no place else to go!)

Here comes a really long sentence: When we die, all we are doing is taking off the costume that we wore in this show, and leaving it behind in this theater called Earth so we can return to the absolute freedom, joy and bliss of the vastness of the ocean of God, which is so marvelously fantastic and wonderful, that for those who have had this experience, all they can say in trying to describe it, is "Wahe Gurul!" which means "Wow! God is great beyond description."

Meanwhile, while we're playing our roles in these bodies, it's God's intention for us to enjoy it. That's why He created it in the first place, remember? "Leela" means play! (Schools have playgrounds, too, and even classrooms can be fun for good students.)

If we're not enjoying life, it's because we've forgotten that life is a movie and we're taking our roles too seriously. If we're not happy, it's because we're stuck in our lower chakras (Energy centers. See chapters Mysterious Kundalini and Chakras) and not utilizing our higher consciousness. If we're listening to our minds instead of our intuition, if we're emotional and commotional — riding the roller coaster of emotional turmoil and reacting to situations instead of resurrecting, we're most likely not happy campers!

Which leads us back to Kundalini Yoga. It's a technology to enable us to control our emotions and minds (not suppress or deny them, but take charge of them, ruling kindly but firmly over them, rather than being a slave to them) so we can enjoy the drama, the comedy. We can go through any tragedy in life without letting it overwhelm us or destroy our happiness.

Happiness, after all, really lies within, not outside ourselves. My reality, my happiness or unhappiness, is what I choose to feel within my own being, and it can't be dependent upon any outside influence. The inherent nature of the soul is joyful. When I'm in tune with, in touch with, in synch with my soul, I'm bound to be happy! Activating the Kundalini so that it can function in the higher chakras makes it much more conveniently possible to do that.

When circumstances are not pleasant, I try to remind myself that life is, after all, a movie. I want to enjoy the film, whether it's a comedy or a tragedy. And I want to remember that some day the lights will go on, the projector will be turned off, and we'll all go Home!

SHOPPING FOR HIGHER CONSCIOUSNESS (another analogy)

You've gone to buy linens in your favorite department store. You push the elevator button to go up to seven, but on the third floor, the elevator stops, the doors open briefly, and your eye catches sight of something really irresistible and appealing. You decide you'll step off for "just a quick look." You find more and more to look at, and get so totally absorbed in browsing through all the fascinating things — lots of them on sale, too (!), — that you lose track of time, and forget the original mission that brought you to the store. By that time the store has closed and you're trapped. It's called "maya." Similarly, it's easy to get trapped in "spiritual maya." Occult powers and psychic phenomena are examples of spiritual maya.

All the distractions in our lives are maya. In Sanskrit, “maya” literally means “that which can be measured.” It is the polarity to the infinite. Maya is understood in Vedanta philosophy as the “apparent creation.” All that we can see and hear and touch and taste with our five senses, anything measurable in any way, is maya. It can be fascinating, it is enticing, it can be fun, but it is not permanent. It can’t last forever. There’s nothing “wrong” with maya. It can give lots of pleasure and excitement, but maya cannot provide happiness. Happiness comes only from within, nowhere else. When you touch that reality of God within you, that is happiness.

Like Pinocchio being lured away to the fair instead of going to school, the glitter of maya can make us forget where we’re going, too! So, before we invest a lot of time and energy in anything, any person, or any activity, it makes good sense to ask ourselves, “Is this really the best use of my time? How much of a detour can I afford to take? Will this really take me towards Home, or farther away?”

BUBBLES AND BRIDGES

*“I am the bubble, make me the sea
I am the bubble, make me the sea
So do Thou my Lord, make me the sea, oh make me the sea
Thou and I are never apart, Thou and I are never apart...”*

In the early days after Yogi Bhañan’s arrival in America, I used to sing this song from the Self-Realization Fellowship song book. He really liked it. Bubbles, sea — it fits right in with the ocean analogy.

Analogies are sometimes useful, but they’re limited. They are intellectual attempts to clarify ideas, concepts that can’t totally be grasped by the intellect. They do give us a bridge of understanding. But to really cross over the bridge, we can’t just talk about getting to the other side. We have to do something. There’s a big difference between describing water and drinking it, or actually jumping in the ocean and swimming! What to do, and how to do it, the ways and means to get your own direct experience of God or Truth, is what Yoga is all about.

PAST LIVES

*In what lifetime did we meet?
For what reason did we part?
Did you — or did I — break somebody's heart?*

*What job is ours?
What lessons to learn?
What debt to pay?
What credit to earn?*

*Do we clash today
Because of wounds long ago?
Were we friends or lovers?
(Would it help to know?)*

*Past lives' fascination
Pulls our focus off track
We need to look forward —
Not go back*

*Whatever was then Brought us to now
The riddle of life
To solve somehow*

*This time do it right
Once and for all
Climb the heights
No more to fall*

*Look to the Light
Open your heart
Master's touch
Gives a head start*

*Truth beyond time
Love beyond space
Infinite souls
Meet in this place.*

(I wrote this poem while facilitating White Tantric Yoga in Espanola, New Mexico, Nov. 30, 1991)

23

Other Paths of Yoga

For those readers who are not familiar with the various paths of yoga, here are some brief descriptions:

Hatha Yoga is the most well-known yoga. It is a beautiful discipline for strengthening the body, with emphasis on developing the will. It utilizes eighty-four traditional yogic postures (asanas) and uses various breathing techniques (pranayam). Practice of Hatha Yoga requires patience and emphasizes flexibility. Mastery takes many years.

Bhakti Yoga is the path of devotion, in which the student or devotee focuses on a particular deity and offers all his or her actions out of love to that "Beloved." Chanting God's name, reciting hymns in praise of God, remembering God, surrendering, worshipping God in a personalized form is the way of the Bhakti yogi.

Karma Yoga is the path of the man or woman of action. (Mahatma Gandhi was an adherent of Karma Yoga.) It requires one to surrender the fruits of one's actions to God. The Karma Yogi always keeps in mind that God is truly the Doer of everything. Therefore, the results of any action do, in fact, belong to Him (He/She/It: GOD). Such non-attachment to the results of one's actions frees a person from creating more karma. An analogy often given for non-attachment is "to live in the world but not of it," or to "be like the lotus in the pond," whose beautiful white blossom remains pure and unstained above the water, unaffected by the mud clinging to its roots below.

Gyan Yoga is considered the path of the intellect, which is by nature a divisive instrument, always separating and comparing. The Gyan Yogi might spend his whole life looking at the Creator and the creation as separate, which would account for the usual textbook description "not this, not that." People sometimes think that Buddha denied the existence of God because he would never say what God is. I think Buddha just didn't want to limit God by trying to define or describe Him.

The intellect is a limited tool. Language can only take us so far. Words can motivate and inspire, uplift and create, but we have to go beyond words, beyond intellectual understanding, to have the direct personal experience of merging with God. That merger is sometimes called "Divine Union." It is "Yoga." You not only get to New York, you become New York! By the way, I do not consider reaching New York the ultimate goal of life. This is just an analogy. God does, of course, live everywhere, including New York.

TRI-MARGA

The Bhagavad Gita (See the Recommended Reading List) calls Karma Yoga, Bhakti Yoga and Gyan Yoga the "Tri-Marga" or Threefold Path.

Raj Yoga is the Royal path, whose method has been preserved in the written aphorisms of Patanjali. These aphorisms have been translated and commented upon in wonderful detail by Christopher Isherwood and Swami Prabhavananda in the book, How to Know God (high on my recommended reading list). The eight steps on the path to liberation or Samadhi begin with ethical precepts, the "do's" and "don'ts" by which the aspirant guides his life. They are called Yams and Niyams. Then Raj Yoga defines and describes the postures (Asanas); the place where the yogi sits, and how he sits; breathing techniques (Pranayam); becoming aware of and controlling the thought waves in the mind (Pratyahar).

Pratyahar is the great-grandfather of positive thinking. It utilizes the technique of substituting a positive vibration in the mind for a negative one. Concentration (Dharana); meditation (Dhyana); and absorption in God (Liberation or Samadhi) are the final steps.

Patanjali also wrote about the nature of the mind and the ego, the various types of purification needed to follow the path of Raj Yoga, and the powers that can come along with its practice.

Mantra Yoga is exactly what the name implies, a path of chanting and meditating on sacred syllables, raising one's vibration through the repetition of sound current. If you think about a drop of water taking a few centuries to make a dent in a rock, you can understand why mantras are repeated over and over again. In some cases it takes a lot of time and repetition to make a change in our consciousness! There are several kinds of sound which are described in detail in our chapter on Mantra.

Laya Yoga may be considered the post-graduate program in Mantra Yoga. It is a more sophisticated use of sound, taking mantra another step further.

24

Tantric Yoga

Probably the most misunderstood type of yoga in the world is Tantric Yoga. It's really quite simple. There are three kinds of Tantric Yoga.

"There's a difference like day and night between the three types of tantric. They are totally different. They are definitely different in quality, quantity, direction, practices, methods, facets, and use."

—Yogi Bhajan

THREE TYPES OF TANTRIC

WHITE TANTRIC is to purify and uplift the being.

BLACK TANTRIC is for mental control of other people.

RED TANTRIC is for sexual energy and senses.

WHITE TANTRIC YOGA

Most energy we experience is either perpendicular or horizontal. Tantric energy is diagonal. White Tantric Yoga is the guided (by the Mahan Tantric) use of tantric energy which serves to accelerate the psychological transformation of the individual, dissolving deep-rooted subconscious neuroses. It is an ancient and very unique form of yogic science. It can only be practiced under the auspices and direction of the Mahan Tantric (Master of White Tantric Yoga), at a time and place specified by him.

You could search the world over, climb the highest mountains of Tibet, seek out the deepest caves of India and not find anyone else properly qualified to teach you White Tantric Yoga, because the one and only person on the planet empowered to do so is Yogi Bhajan. He is the designated Mahan Tantric of this time.

Clearing out the deepest corridors of the subconscious mind, White Tantric Yoga is a very powerful group meditative experience. It uses mantra and yogic breathing techniques. You work with a partner. The Mahan Tantric connects with the students and guides the diagonal tantric energy using his subtle body. You can learn more about the subtle body in the chapter called "Ten Bodies."

White Tantric Yoga is not something that you can go home and practice on your own. This prohibition must be very strongly emphasized.

All the participants sit in rows, facing each other. The tantric energy travels in a zig-zag pattern up and down the rows. The students may meditate silently or at other times chant aloud, depending upon the instructions given. Sometimes the eyes are open, sometimes closed. Various mudras (hand positions) and postures are given. Although it is practiced with a partner, White Tantric Yoga is not a "sexual" yoga. On the contrary, it transmutes the sex energy from the lower chakras (energy centers) to the higher chakras.

In just a few minutes of White Tantric Yoga meditation you can accomplish results that would take months to achieve with any other practice. Yogi

Bhajan says, "White Tantra is not the car, but it is taking the car through the car wash. Wax and clean and polish it, then keep it going."

Each person's experience of White Tantric Yoga is different. Each gets what he or she needs at that point in their journey along the path. It is a very deep and transformational cleansing process, yet people with no prior training or practice in yoga can participate in the Courses.

"From our childhood we have subconscious blocks and White Tantric Yoga is nothing but a conscious penetration through those blocks...It will give you a new start and a better life. It is neither a religion nor a philosophy, nor an exercise, nothing. It just works right there, in a couple of hours.”¹

We use the telephone to connect with other people at a distance, and we don't think that's unusual. The way we connect with the Mahan Tantric is very similar. We connect with him through his subtle body. He uses it to guide the diagonal tantric energy which penetrates and breaks up the blocks of anger, guilt, and fear buried in our subconscious. The Mahan Tantric does not have to be physically present to do his job. He has created Video courses in which he teaches White Tantric Yoga. He has given the privilege of facilitating these courses to a few individuals who travel with his video tapes on specific dates to specific cities. I hope you will have the opportunity to attend a White Tantric Yoga Course. There is nothing like it anywhere.

*Just remember, in spirit, in flesh,
in eons, from time to time,
space to space, for centuries,
for lives we have been together,
playing the play of God
in the planet Earth, the Universe, which is for us called life.*

Sat Nam.

—Yogi Bhaian, 1991

25

The Ten Bodies

We know that we have a physical body. We can see it, touch it, feel it and so can other people (if we let them). But most of us are not aware that we have other bodies, which are equally real, if not more so. The funny thing is that we identify so strongly with our physical bodies, that we think of ourselves primarily in physical terms. It seems as if the physical body becomes the focus of our whole identity. As important and valuable as the physical body is, it is not who we are, because who we are, our essential self, can never change. You certainly don't have the same physical body you were born with, yet you know you're still you. Since this is practically the whole point of this book, I'm going to keep repeating it over and over: "you" are not your body or your mind(s). You are much more permanent than that. Sat Nam isn't born weighing six pounds-nine ounces, growing to 120 pounds; Sat Nam doesn't get the measles, go through menopause, or worry about dry skin. Sat Nam is your eternal true identity. It is who you are, who you were, and who you will be, now and forever. Truth is your identity.

You might visualize your various bodies as layers of clothing, the physical body being the overcoat you wear for a lifetime. During your whole life, rain or shine, summer or winter, you never take it off, so you don't see the beautiful jacket or suit underneath, much less the dress or shirt under that. Until you develop a special kind of "x-ray" vision, you definitely never see the body that is wearing all those garments, which is the:

1. SOUL BODY

The first body is the Soul Body. It is your very best friend. It is God's light which lives in your heart. The Soul Body never dies. It goes with you forever. It's a good idea to get acquainted with it as soon as possible and develop an ongoing communication. Best time to get the conversation going is during morning sadhana. (See the chapter Sadhana: Your Spiritual Bank Account for a detailed guide to sadhana.)

THREE MENTAL BODIES

Here's a brief summary of the three main aspects of the Mind, the body that many people mistakenly identify with. You can read more about your mind(s) in the chapter called Conquer the Mind, You Conquer the World.

2. THE NEGATIVE MIND protects you by warning you what could be the danger or loss in any situation.

3. THE POSITIVE MIND inspires you by telling you what is the possible gain, the advantage to you, in any situation.

4. THE NEUTRAL MIND listens to the intellectual input from both the Negative Mind and the Positive Mind and then leads you to the best decision, using unbiased intuitive knowledge. Whenever you want to reach outside of yourself, reach out with your Neutral Mind. It is a most graceful, wonderful secret of success.

5. PHYSICAL BODY

The Physical Body was given to you so you could participate fully in life on this planet. It is a temple for God to live in while He sees through your eyes and hears through your ears. You were given the physical body so God could experience and enjoy (!) His creation. The physical is a balance point between heaven and earth. The key to perfecting the Physical Body is balance: balance in diet; balance in exercise; balance in work, in play, and rest. It always makes sense to avoid extremes. Don't be lazy and don't be fanatic.

6. ARC BODY

The Arc Body is a line of energy that goes in an arc from ear tip to ear tip. It is sometimes called your “halo.” This spiritual body projects who you are to other people without a word being spoken. It also protects you from negative energy directed towards you. Have you ever felt something, and turned around to find someone was staring at you? That’s one experience of your arcline in action.

7. AURIC BODY

The Auric Body is a sphere of electromagnetic energy that surrounds the physical body. It can extend up to nine feet in every direction. This body protects you and also gives you the ability to uplift yourself and others. Some people can see the auric body as a field of flowing colored light. You may have experienced the auric body when you were near someone and simply felt their energy. Being in the aura of a spiritual and loving person is peaceful and healing. As the energy field of their aura interacts with ours, it automatically elevates us. (Remember, “Spirituality cannot be taught, it has to be caught, like the measles. You get it from someone who’s got it.”)

8. PRANIC BODY

The Pranic Body controls the breath and takes in Prana, the life force energy of the universe. The Pranic Body gives you energy, courage, control over your mind, and healing power. When you breathe, you are feeding your Pranic Body. As you practice pranayam, you’ll experience the expansion of strength of this body.

9. SUBTLE BODY

The Subtle Body gives you the opportunity to understand and master the subtlety of life. It can help you understand what is going on around you and how things work. Those people who can tune into situations easily or pick up new skills as if by magic, have developed the Subtle Body.

As the Mahan Tantric, Yogi Bhajan has explained that he always teaches with his Subtle Body. We have experienced the projection of his powerful presence during his White Tantric Yoga video courses. Even though his physical body may not be there, his Subtle Body most definitely is present and actively engaged with us.

10. RADIANT BODY

The Radiant Body gives you spiritual royalty and radiance. The strength of the Radiant Body will make you courageous in the face of any and every obstacle. Good things are drawn to you through a developed and powerful Radiant Body. On a practical level, people with well developed Radiant Bodies are said to have "charisma." Their very presence works for them before they say one word. They virtually "shine."

YOGI BHAJAN ON THE TEN BODIES

"You are a total combination of ten bodies. You have a Spiritual Body, you have three Mental Bodies (Negative, Positive, and Neutral); then you have this Physical Body, the Arc Body (which you call "halo"); and you have the simple Auric Body and a Subtle Body, Pranic Body, and a Radiant Body. These ten bodies are interlocked, but two are free to leave."

WHAT IS DEATH?

"Whenever the soul desires to leave the Physical Body, the Arc Body and all the other bodies remain behind because they have no combination. The Physical Body's pranic connection with the Pranic Body totally breaks, and the Soul leaves with the Subtle Body. That means, your identity is gone. (Your physical body remains, but "you" are gone. We call it death.)

"But do you understand what that indicates? If in subtlety you become very refined, and in activity you become very subtle, very subtle, you are very near to your Soul. The Spirit and the Subtle body are very much related. There's a direct relationship between the Subtle body and the Spiritual body. They never leave each other. So, anything you do which is refined — refined art, refined acts, refined speech, anything which is not gross — will put you nearer to the Soul. That's rather a simple way of reaching your God-consciousness."

26

Going Home

Yogi Bhajan Speaks on Death And Dying¹

"What is death? Death is a process where your consciousness does not exist within the control of your ego. You can be brain-dead and still alive. Death — you share it every day with yourself. At a certain moment when you sleep you do not know if you are a man or a woman, or a person, or who you are, or what your status is, and you are "gone." It is that complete sleep in absolutely a state of turiya (deep, dreamless sleep—see chapter on Sleep) which gives your body what it needs for the next day. If that sleep is taken away from you for twenty-six days, you will die automatically, there is no lethal injection required.

If you do not understand, go to those people who cannot sleep at night. Look at their life and their story. It is most miserable.

"I have died once in my life. And I'll tell you my personal experience about death..." Yogi Bhajan went on to describe in detail a trip he took to a holy temple in India which was at the top of a very high mountain. He says, "It was a very painful journey." After a long and strenuous climb, he was so hot and tired, as he puts it, he "did the biggest blunder of my life." He drank a glass of ice-cold water. The shock of the ice water must have been too much, for he collapsed on the ground. His friends carried him inside and sent for a doctor. When the doctor arrived, he was declared dead!

"...When I woke up, I had a blanket over my face." Then he saw everybody running around in excitement and distress. According to their records, he had been dead for 45 minutes. The doctor had declared him dead. But Yogi Bhajan woke up and said, "Oh, I was dead?" They said, "Sir, yes you were."

"Now I'm not? I'm alive?"

"Yes Sir, you are alive."

I said, "You are a doctor here?"

He said, "Yes, I'm a doctor."

I said, "How did I die?"

He said, "We do not know, outside at the stall you fell unconscious. So you were brought here and I examined you, and there was no heartbeat and everything was over with. And then your friends were running around trying to contact your headquarters to report that you were dead and to find out what to do next."

So, I asked for them to come in and I looked at them and said "I'm fine."

Here he goes on to describe more of what he experienced while he was dead:

"...After I fainted, it was like a cylindrical round, what you call 'lift' (elevator). You might all be afraid of dying, but dying is the most beautiful, wonderful experience. Once in a while as a Yogi I get to that experience. (He then scientifically described the stage of meditation that brings ecstasy.) We then get into something like that. It's a great experience. I was thinking, thinking, thinking, going down, as our lifts sometimes go down, and down, and down and don't stop. And I came out. And there was a round square (like a town square). It was highly lit. There were two sides to it. Right and left. Left side like a bar or cafe. Very warm, very hot and people were talking, you could hear voices. And you see on that left side all your relatives. Believe me or not. And on the right side also you see relatives, but it is like a place with snow, like you are going to a hill station [Indian outposts high up in the mountains]. And you were right in the center, and from both sides your thought relatives call on you.

"I decided to come up. I took the lift, neither I went right nor I went left. I came back, sat in the lift, came up and I woke up and opened my eyes. That is my experience of death.

"And it shall happen to you all. What happens in death, when you have to die, you have exactly 30 seconds.

"There are three types of death. One is disease and sickness, you pay your karma and you struggle in the end of life. People say it's a miserable death. It's the best death because you take all the pain on your body. Martyrs take on their body, and humans take on their body and they pay their karma. It's a very painful death. It's every day, little by little, sickness. You know you are sinking, you know you are going and that's the last time when you can consciously connect with your infinity. You are going. Pain is there. HOW you are going, HOW you will deal with that pain.

HOW you can create conquering that pain? If you can conquer that pain, in your language—not in my language—you have already found the "heavens." If you surrender to that pain, you have already found your hell. There's nothing in between. All this meditation, all this spirituality, all this whole getting up in the morning, three o'clock and cold water, two and a half hours, giving 1/10th of the earnings, having great temples made, and millions of people following you means nothing if you miss that 30 seconds. Period. All these practices are preparation towards death.

"Death is nothing but a good sleep."

It doesn't mean a thing. It is absolutely a joke that all you do is to live. All your comforts are to live. You have never prepared to die. It amazes me - all over the world I go — that nobody understands this is the eventual un-defyable act. We all have to die. Whether you are a Sikh or a Hindu, Christian, you are short or tall, death is inevitable. And every day, meditatively you must die.

If you want no fear of death in the end, you have only one thing to do. You must voluntarily die. It's called turiya jagat suupanat...It's called turiya stage. 'I can die, and I can live again,' consciously. And please find some good yogi, or a good teacher who can teach you. If you're a Jew, go to some Rabbi who knows about it. If you're Christian, find some Priest. If you're a Sikh...

"Death comes five times to every person. Four times it can be avoided, averted. Fifth time it happens.

"Death is nothing but a good sleep. A Sikh looks at death as union with the Beloved Creator. It is a time of joy because the soul has longed for this moment of ultimate yoga (which means union). Sadness at this time is an experience of one's individual loss for the departed. Sikhs regard this time as an opportunity to love and accept God's will and sing His Praises."

YOU'RE HUMAN AREN'T YOU ?

Many years ago, I was devastated when a most wonderful young man, whom I loved very dearly, died in an automobile accident. Bhai Sahib Dayal Singh was barely twenty years old when he was killed. Despite my intellectual, philosophic acceptance of the fact that his death was surely a liberation for him, I was grief stricken. However, I believed I was supposed to maintain a stoic "yogic" non-attachment so I didn't want anyone, especially my spiritual teacher, to see me cry.

Yogi Bhajan had just returned from a lecture tour when he was told of Bhai Sahib Dayal Singh's death. There were several of us sitting in the living room, still in shock from the news. Every few minutes, overcome with emotion, I would go into the bathroom and cry. Then I would splash cold water on my face and return, trying to keep my composure. After a few such exits and entrances, Yogi Bhajan asked me what I was doing, I said, "I know I shouldn't cry, but..." He wouldn't let me finish the sentence. He simply said, "You're human aren't you?"

Yes, of course there is a legitimate reason and a need for grieving. It is to soothe and comfort us for our loss, for our feeling of separation, our missing the joy of that person being here with us. We go through a grieving process for our own well-being. Prayer, faith, and the loving support of friends and family can help us during a time of bereavement.

However, what the person who has died needs, is for us to let go, and release that soul, and not keep it tied to the earth with our grief. If we truly love someone, we will want to make their journey home to God smooth and direct.

There is a mantra to chant when someone dies. It sends out the vibrations that help carry a soul across all the planes to reach Home. That mantra is "AKAAL." Akaal means "undying." When someone has died, it is a Sikh practice for the congregation to chant AKAAL three to five times. The second syllable "kaal"—which means death—is held a long time. A deep breath precedes each repetition of the mantra. This is done during the Ardas, the traditional prayer, that is recited at every Sikh worship service and celebration. Anyone can use this mantra.

One of the most consoling experiences I have ever had was being able to help facilitate the transition when my mother died. She was 92, and had been seriously ill for some time. Even so, I found it hard to “let go.” Cutting the umbilical cord at any age is more difficult than I had realized. By chanting AKAAL with four friends at her deathbed, I found myself greatly comforted and very grateful to know that I had done something to help her on her way.

Death is a fact of life. The more often we remind ourselves of the ultimate reality, that all things come from God and all things go to God eventually, including us, the easier it will be for us to handle that final journey home, for ourselves and for those whom we love.

THE CHOICE

*Two things are inevitable they say,
Death and taxes, you have to pay.*

*Country to country, taxes may vary
But death's a reality you simply can't bury.*

*It's only a body the soul is leaving behind
So, for a Yogi, it's liberation time!*

*Free at long last of the restrictions and limits
The physical body imposed
The Yogi, awake and aware, consciously chooses
The place where the soul finally goes.*

*There are two paths that open before you
When you leave earth plane below
One is warm and cozy, very appealing,
With friends and family that you know
Calling and beckoning, inviting you in
But it's a trap, delusion of maya trying to win
Trying to keep you from going beyond
And reaching your ultimate goal.
Turn away from temptation
Choose the road covered with the snow.*

*The cold and snowy route will take you Home where you belong
So when the time comes to turn left or right, be sure to remember this song:*

*Take the cold and snowy route, ignore temptation please!
This final choice you have to make;
So you can meet your SELF, the GOD, with ease.*

May the long time sun shine upon you
All love surround you
And the pure light within you Guide your way on.

This "Sunshine Song¹" is sung at the end of every 3HO event and every class in Kundalini Yoga. It is a positive affirmation bringing blessings to all.

Section Two

THINGS TO DO

General Guidelines for the Practice of Kundalini Yoga

- Use common sense. If you have medical problems, consult with a doctor and let your Kundalini Yoga teacher know your situation.
- Begin each session by chanting ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO.
- Breathe through your nose unless otherwise instructed.
- Wait at least one or preferably two hours after eating.
- Take your socks off. Best to have bare feet.
- Keep your spine covered.
- Ideally, stick to the prescribed times indicated in instructions. You may, however, decrease the time you do an exercise, if you need to, but do not increase the time that is specified.
- In general, it is advisable to relax briefly after each exercise, i.e., sit or lie down motionless, approximately 30 seconds to one minute.
- For maximum benefit anytime, unless another mantra is indicated, inhale thinking SAT and exhale thinking NAM.
- Ideally, cover your head.
- Women, please take special note: during the heaviest part of your monthly menstruation, avoid strenuous yoga. In particular do not do the following:
 - Bow Pose
 - Breath of Fire
 - Camel Pose
 - Locust Pose
 - Root Lock
 - Sat Kriya
 - Shoulder Stand or any inverted posture
 - Strenuous Leg Lifts

Mantra & Meditation

Key to Pronunciation

A like the 'a' in about
AA like the 'a' in want
AY like the 'ay' in say
Al like the 'a' in hand
I like the 'i' in bit
U like the 'u' in put

OO like the 'oo' in food
O like the 'o' in go
E like the 'ay' in say
EE like the 'e' in meet
AAU like the 'ow' in now

I must confess, some of the more common words that occur in the various mantras in this book have not been spelled according to the above key. For instance, the word "Guru" should probably be spelled G'roo,— but I don't like the way that looks, so I have to trust that you'll know how to pronounce it correctly wherever it appears! Similarly, "SAT NAM" would be spelled "Sat Naam" phonetically (though I have indicated near the beginning of the book that it rhymes with "but Mom"—unless you're from Canada where "mom" sounds like "mum"). Anyway, we'll try to catch all the places where you might need a clue to pronunciation, and spell phonetically for you. The best thing, of course, is to get a tape, or find a Kundalini Yoga teacher so you can listen and actually hear the sounds for yourself.

Beyond the above simple vowel sounds (I hope they're simple for you), some t's and d's, th's and dh's are reflexive, some are aspirated, but that's a bit more complicated than we need to deal with here. My suggestion is that if you're interested in a more detailed explanation of how to pronounce Gurumukhi (the language in which the sacred mantras were originally written) you read Psyche of the Soul, which does a wonderful job of explaining. You'll find it listed in the Recommended Reading List of books in the Sources and Resources section of this book.

How to Chant

The Technology of Mantra

Here are some important guidelines to apply when chanting any mantra.

1. Remember, chanting is not singing or speaking, it is VIBRATING. You want to "feel" the mantra vibrating.
2. Keep your spine straight.
3. Chant from your navel point for maximum power.
4. HEAR the sound of the mantra coming through you. (After all, you aren't really chanting anyway, the One who breathes in you is doing it!)
5. If you're chanting with other people, listen to the leader and/or the group vibration and match it, stay with it.
6. When chanting aloud, be consciously aware of the activity of your tongue on the meridian points in the roof of your mouth. Some mantras, such as Har, or Haree, are supposed to be chanted only with the tip of the tongue, without moving the lips at all, while other mantras, such as Wahe Guru, at certain times, call for exaggerating the movement of the lips. Read all the instructions and follow them. Do the best you can, and let God do the rest!

WHY MEDITATE ?

"Meditation is one process through which you can resolve conflict and misfortune, rather than playing it through in real life. So for every child of a human, to learn the art of meditation is a must."¹

- Jap is when you repeat with the tip of your tongue
- Dhiaan is when you meditate at the focal point at the tip of the nose or the chin with the optical nerve.²
- Simran is when you recite mentally.

"Man has two parts in the body which have to be worked on...That's the upper palate of the mouth and the frontal lobe of the forehead. If these two areas are undeveloped in your life, you don't have a chance, it doesn't matter, despite all the education on this planet and everything else.

- Frontal lobe controls the personality.
- Upper palate, the hypothalamus, controls your automatic systems.

"You have to break the lead here (forehead). You have to meditate that way. That's why Kundalini Yoga is very easy and is for householders. It doesn't require any condition. It's just simple: Close your eyes nine-tenths, look at the tip of your nose. Or close your eyes, roll them down, look through the chin. And with the tip of the tongue, utter six words:

HAR HARAY HAREE WHA HE GURU

"Start practicing to develop your intuition. Lock your eyes at the tip of your nose and chant the mantra, "WA HE GURU." Your intuition will get clear in 90 days.

Sit with a straight spine. Close your eyes nine tenths of the way. Focus your eyes at the tip of the nose. Breathe long and deep. Listen to the tape, *Jai Ram, Siri Ram*³. After three minutes, inhale deep. Open your eyes. Relax.

"Whenever you will meditate like this,⁴ this frontal lobe will become hard. And the more you meditate, it will become like lead. And the funny thing is, one day automatically it will not be lead. It's broken. You will have intuition to see the unseen, know the unknown, and hear the unheard. And your life will not be the same as you are now."⁵

Invoking the Flow of Eternal Power

ONG NAMO GURU DEV NAMO

The first step in invoking the Flow Of Eternal Power in your life is to chant Ong Namō Guru Dev Namō. This mantra calls upon the Creator, the Divine Teacher, inside every human being. It establishes a strong and clear connection so that you can receive the highest guidance, energy, and inspiration. Always chant it before beginning any practice of Kundalini Yoga.

ONG is the Creator

NAMO means reverent greetings, salutations

GURU is the giver of the technology (GU= darkness, RU=light)

DEV means transparent (non-physical)

Ong Namō Guru Dev Namō is a very essential, important mantra.

Remember to chant it at least three times before you begin each session of Kundalini Yoga.

(Detailed instructions for chanting are given in the chapter on Tuning In)

The Seed Sound

SAT NAM

SAT: Truth NAM: Name, Identity

"Truth is your identity: God's Name is Truth."

SAT NAM (rhymes with "but mom"). It is the seed (bij) mantra.

It reinforces the divine consciousness in everyone.

Use it as a greeting, anytime, anyplace.

By saying "Sat Nam" to each other, we acknowledge the highest consciousness in each of us. For that moment, we are relating as soul to soul, and we are truly "One in the spirit." (Then we can go on and agree or disagree about anything we want!)

► Linking the breath with SAT NAM is one of the easiest ways to maintain a constant reinforcement of your Self-awareness.

► Truth IS your identity.

► Inhale SAT and exhale NAM whenever you can.

Wherever you go and whatever you do, remember, SAT NAM lives and breathes in you.

Raise the Kundalini

CHAKRA MEDITATION

In this meditation, you successively focus on each of the eight projected centers of consciousness, applying the Mul Bandh (Root Lock: See Energy Up! in this section) with each repetition of the mantra SAT NAM.

- Sitting in Easy Pose, spine straight, inhale deeply, chant SAT NAM (long drawn out syllable “Sat” and short “Nam” as you apply the Mul Bandh and concentrate at the first chakra, the rectum).
- Release the Root Lock, inhale deeply again, and chant SAT NAM, applying the Root Lock and focusing at the second projected center of consciousness, the sex organ.
- Release the Root Lock, inhale deeply, apply the Root Lock, chant SAT NAM as you focus on the third center of consciousness, the navel point.
- Continue this same process, going next to the fourth chakra, the Heart Center, at the center of the chest as you chant SAT NAM and apply the Root Lock.
- Then to the Throat, next to the Third Eye (between the eyebrows and up about 1/4 inch), then to the top of the head (the Crown Chakra) and with the eighth repetition of the mantra, visualize the sound going into the Aura that surrounds you.

You can repeat this complete sequence over and over again. Consciously bring your concentration successively up through all the chakras each time. Breathe very deeply before each repetition.

MEDITATION FOR CHANGE

SA-TA-NA-MA

31-Minute Meditation

The Power to Change Habit Patterns

Want to pull in all the loose ends, focus, and concentrate? Here's a mantra to help you consolidate and CHANGE YOUR HABITS. This mantra is a catalyst for change. So don't be surprised if your spiritual cleansing process is vastly accelerated! Be prepared, your status quo is about to be shifted into high gear.

Here's what the syllables mean:

SA	Totality (All that ever was, is or shall be)
TA	Creativity (The Principle of Creation)
NA	Destruction (Crucifixion)
MA	Regeneration (Resurrection)

SA	thumb and forefinger (A)
TA	thumb and middle finger (B)
NA	thumb and ring finger (C)
MA	thumb and little finger (D)

Sit with your spine straight. Eyes are closed. With your hands resting on your knees, press the tip of the thumb of each hand firmly to each of the finger tips of that hand in sequence, starting with the forefingers while chanting each syllable in turn. Be sure as you chant each syllable to press firmly enough so that when you release the pressure, the tip of the finger is briefly white. If you press too gently you'll put yourself to sleep!

Keep moving your fingers throughout the entire meditation.

- First five minutes chant ALOUD
- Next five minutes chant in a LOUD WHISPER
- Eleven minutes chant SILENTLY
- Five minutes LOUD WHISPER
- Five minutes ALOUD

Inhale deeply, lift arms straight up in the air, vigorously shake out the fingers (approximately 1 minute). Relax.

SA TA NA MA is sometimes called the panch shabd (five sound current mantra). The fifth syllable is "A" which is common to the other four.

PICTURE THIS!

Meditation With Visualization

Although you do not have to know the meaning of the syllables, you may want to think about the concepts as you chant them. In fact, at one time Yogi Bhajan gave us some visual images to use while chanting this mantra. For those of you who would enjoy VISUALIZING, this is what he taught:

- Each time you chant "SA" picture all the galaxies, planets, suns, moons, and stars.
- Each time you chant "TA" visualize tremendous radiance, the brilliant, dazzling light of a trillion suns.
- Each time you chant "NA" see a winter landscape. The branches of the barren trees standing silent in the snow, all of nature dormant.
- Each time you chant "MA" picture thousands of spring flowers in a burst of glorious technicolor, brilliant blooms joyfully blanketing the hillside as far as the eye can see!

Change of Habit

Breath Meditation

The law of the universe is change. Everything changes. However, with every change in our life, one thing seems not to change: the attachment to our own ego. You can change, but your ego does not let you see your own maturity or potential. This creates a condition of constant hassle in the mind. The difference between your reality and your perception of it, through the ego, creates doubts and doubts create misery. Doubt steals three feet of your auric radiance. But the ego will not let you change easily. It blocks communication. You must assess yourself to come out of the darkness.

Ultimately, to be happy through all change and to have the full radiance of your soul, there must be surrender of your self to your higher Self. To aid the process of self-evaluation and to probe the ego to change and unblock subconscious communication, practice this meditation each day.¹

Sit with a very straight spine. Lift the chest. Curl the fingers in, as if making a fist. The finger tips will be on the pads of the hands. Then bring the two hands together at the center of the chest. The hands will touch lightly in two places only: the knuckles of the middle (Saturn) fingers and the pads of the thumbs. The thumbs are extended toward the heart center and are pressed together.

Hold this position as you feel the energy across the thumbs and knuckles. Begin long, deep and full breathing. Concentrate on the flow of the breath. Continue for 31 minutes. Then inhale deeply and relax for 5 minutes. After practicing and mastering this time for the kriya, you can extend the time to do it for another 31 minutes after the rest period.

"The kundalini experience does not mean you have gone into a deep breathless trance and are beyond this world . . . It integrates you more fully with reality and gives you a broader vision and sensitivity so that you can act more efficiently."

—Yogi Bhajan, Ph.D.

This is the definitive guide to Kundalini Yoga—taught for thousands of years, and revealed to the West in recent decades by the master Yogi Bhajan. This "sacred science" is surprisingly simple to learn and, practiced regularly, it can strengthen the nervous system, balance the glandular system, and harness the energy not only of our bodies, but of our minds and emotions. Fully illustrated with photographs, this gentle introduction to Kundalini Yoga covers:

- ♦ Poses and positions ranging from beginners to more advanced levels ♦ Diet and lifestyle
- ♦ Breathing and stretching techniques ♦ Chanting and meditation exercises
- ♦ General guidelines that help us gain the greatest benefit from yogic practice

Kundalini Yoga can help you handle stress, improve your health, overcome depression, feel more energetic, enjoy your life, and love yourself more deeply than ever before. With this guide, you can begin to bring yoga into your daily life today—and discover a new way to meet your physical, psychological, and spiritual challenges.

Shakti Parwha Kaur Khalsa was the first woman to study with Yogi Bhajan in the United States. He is the leader of the Sikh religion in the West and the founder of 3HO (Healthy, Happy, Holy Organization), which has 300 Kundalini Yoga centers around the world. Shakti has been teaching Kundalini Yoga for nearly 30 years, and was ordained as a minister of the Sikh Dharma in 1974.

ISBN 0-399-52420-7

$16.95 U.S.
$23.95 CAN